The Shield Remembered

Volume 81

Murray State University • Enrollment: 10,100

114 Wilson Hall, Murray, Ky 42071

March 2004 - May 2005

For over 80 years, the stories, photos and memories that have filled the pages of the Murray State Shield yearbook have been remembered by the rich and diverse groups of students, faculty and staff that made up the heart of Murray State University.

Since 1925, the Shield has recorded the events and moments that have defined this unique institution in such a way that they are preserved for generations to come.

As Murray State evolved, so did the Shield. The original volume was a much smaller book, bound with a brown leather cover and adorned with a simple gold rendition of a familiar Murray State symbol: the shield with three stars. The book featured not only students of then Murray State College, but also local high school students.

When production of Volume 81 of the Shield began, the staff spent a considerable amount of time looking through old volumes for ideas.

"Some books are undeservedly forgotten, but none are undeservedly remembered."

After seeing an amazing collection of the history of Murray State, it was clear that a book needed to be made to commemorate the journey that this book has gone through as it was representative of the great change and growth that has occurred for over eight decades at Murray State.

The 2005 book marks the first edition of the Shield to be in full color. It features coverage of traditional Murray State events as well as the changes Murray State is always enduring. This book features events like the opening of the Wellness Center, the opening of the first phase of the new science complex and the long awaited renovations of Waterfield Library.

Each section of this book briefly highlights a decade in Murray State history, ranging from campus life in the 1920s to the establishment of the residential college system in the 1990s. These pages also contain the many memories made in the 2004-2005 school year.

This book is Murray State then and now. It is Murray State Remembered.

"It is policy of the Board of Regents of Murray State Normal School to maintain a standard institution in every respect, for the training of teachers to the end that the children of Western Kentucky may be properly trained for the duties of citizenship," stated the policy of the Board of Regents in 1925.

From that policy it can be noticed that there have been some changes in the past 80 years. The first and most obvious was the change in the name of our institution. In 1925, the school was not called Murray State University, it was called Murray State Normal School and was strictly an institution for teachers.

Murray State was a co-ed school but had separate dormitories for male and female students. "The Rainy T. Wells Hall" was the women's dormitory. The building still stood on Murray State's campus 80 years later and had become home to the department of psychology, health services and the office of the president of the university.

With less than 500 people attending the university in 1925 there were still several ways to become involved. There were two prestigious honor societies, Wilsonian and Allenian. These societies were named after Woodrow Wilson, former president of the United States, and James Lane Allen, a fiction writer from Kentucky.

There were also organizations such as the Education Club, which focused on the teaching profession. The Conversation Club which was a group of students who got together and exchanged opinions on current topics or just traded stories.

Murray State also had a football and baseball team in 1925.

In 1925 John W. Carr, president of Murray State, had an opinion of this institution. He said, "Excellent faculty, standard courses of study, full certifying privileges, new and commodious buildings, ample equipment, beautiful campus and healthful and wholesome environment."

There were other things happening throughout the country in 1925 that greatly differ from 2004. According to the Kingwood College Library, teachers' average annual salary was $970. It took 13 days to reach California from New York. Henry Ford's invention of the assembly line made the price of a Ford automobile $290.

Life in the 1920's began with a lot of excitement and promises. This was the jazz age and the roaring 20's. The stock market crash on October 24, 1929 sent the county into the Great Depression.

In 2005, there were 10,000 students enrolled at Murray State. In 1996, Murray State University switched to a residential college system and formed eight colleges out of the former dormitories. It became easier to get involved on-campus with over 200 different organizations. Over the years, Murray State University thrived despite economic highs and lows and became known as Kentucky's public ivy league school.

Sigma Alpha Iota Works to Re-Build All Campus Sing

As the only musical sorority on the campus, Sigma Alpha Iota has been promoting music on the campus of Murray State.

The most predominately known activity Sigma Alpha Iota hosted was All Campus Sing. All Campus Sing was an annual campus wide sing-off held on the Quad every April. Students, faculty and community members brought lawn chairs and blankets to sit on while watching their favorite group or organization compete.

"The money raised from All Campus Sing helped to fund scholarships to Murray State University students," Lisa Bell, junior from Murray, said.

All Campus Sing was a very prestigious event in the past. In the last few years, however, the number of organizations participating dwindled.

"I had a blast participating in All Campus Sing with my sorority my freshman year," Charlotte Perry, senior from Huntingdon, Tenn., said. "Yet spring seems to be the busiest time for Greek organizations and All Campus Sing is competitive and time consuming to prepare for."

Bell, president of Sigma Alpha Iota, said the organization was tossing around ideas to rebuild All Campus Sing. One idea she had mentioned was to allow independent groups compete.

"I hope Sigma Alpha Iota can find a way to improve participation for next year," Perry said.

The 2004 All Campus Sing was held on April 23. Instead of performing on the steps outside of Lovett Auditorium, since there was a threat of rain, the event was held inside Lovett.

Alpha Omicron Pi won first place competing with music from the movie Sister Act.

"After all the hard work it felt good to get up and show it," Kali Steiner, junior from Marion, Ill., said. "It was a good experience and I wish more teams would have participated."

The second place winner was Hester Residential College, which competed with an 80's theme.

There was also a performance from the Baptist Student Union's sign language team. Phi Mu Alpha, Murray State's musical fraternity, performed during All Campus Sing as well as the sisters of Sigma Alpha Iota.

All Campus Sing has been a major event for Sigma Alpha Iota for over 40 years. With this event, students have had a chance to demonstrate their musical talents and have fun while promoting music in the quad of Murray State.

The Greatest Show on Earth

Circus brought big-city entertainment to Murray

“Ladies and Gentleman, boys and girls of all ages,” that opening line can only mean one thing...the circus is in town. The 134-year-old Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey circus came to the Regional Special Events Center to entertain and thrill boys and girls of all ages.

Before the show began, audience members were allowed to go backstage to meet the animals that would be participating in the show, including the much-anticipated baby elephant, Gunther.

The show's first act featured Jumpin' Jon Weiss, who balanced a table, shopping cart and, most impressively, a 12-foot ladder on his chin. He also served as the emcee for the circus, introducing all of the acts.

“My favorite act of the night was the alligator guy,” Phillip Sollitto, senior from Paducah, said. “All the crazy stuff he did reminded me of the crocodile hunter.”

The wildest act of the night featured three American alligators and two Burmese pythons. The audience gasped as the performer ended his act by putting his head in the jaws of the largest alligator.

Another animal act followed, featuring six horses. The riders mounted the horses while they were running, rode the horses backwards, and stood on the horses as they were running in the ring. The last rider performed the most daring trick, riding underneath his horse as it jumped over a fiery rope.

“I didn't know horses could do tricks like that,” Lindsey Flowers, junior from Mayfield, said. “It was neat to see the horse jump over the fire,”

The most anticipated act of the night featured a 2-year-old Asian elephant named Gunther and his 6-year-old brother. They stood on two legs, walked on a balance beam, played soccer, and even dunked a basketball.

“I was surprised at how many cool tricks they could perform,” Mark Toren, senior from Paducah, said. “I'd never seen an elephant paint a picture before,”

Herkules, “The World's Strongest Man,” bent steel with his bare hands and had a cannonball shot at his stomach. He ended his act by lying on the ground and having a Jeep Wrangler drive over him.

The show also featured a trapeze act, several clowns and a Thunderdome motorcycle act.

The circus brought smiles and laughter to all those who saw it. Everyone in the audience will remember the fun and entertaining night for months to come.

Besides emceeing the show, Jumpin' Jon Weiss shows off his balancing skills. He balanced this shopping cart on his chin.

With a raised foot instead of a hand-over-heart, Gunther, an Asian elephant, helps with the National Anthem. Gunther was a big attraction in the show.

The Mighty Herkules competes against children in the audience in tug of war. Cannonballs, steel rods, there was nothing that could stop Herkules.

Before the Circus begins, spectators check out the various aspects of the show first-hand. This not only included equipment, but the animals used in the show were also on display.

High Steppin'

Alpha Phi Alpha steps it up a notch

Anxious students from Murray State University and surrounding schools filled the bottom and top of Lovett Auditorium where they waited to see what would happen at Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc.'s Step Off 2K4.

Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc. sponsored the Step Off to raise money for their national philanthropy, the March of Dimes, a charity that helps save the lives of premature babies by raising money to do research and find cures.

"The idea of the Step Off came from The Ebony and Ivory Showcase, which was Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc. that began in the early 1980s," Richard Rowland, senior from Louisville, said.

The Step Off had 15 slots, but only 13 organizations participated.

"If we had more than (15 organizations) the show would be extremely long," Rowland said. "We don't know what we're going to do because the residential colleges don't even have a part in our step off, yet."

Each group was given a coach determined by who coached the team before or having a drawing.

"When a new guy comes in like I did last year, he will jump in and coach with someone who will be leaving," Marcus Lykes, junior from Atwood, Tenn., said.

“We spent a lot of time practicing,” Dara Metzger, junior from Paducah, said. “I think that we met like three to four times a week, practicing for one to two hours each time we met. Mozz is like a family so the practice was fun and we had a great time doing it.”

“We most enjoyed getting to compete and try to win back the title we won in 2001 when we won the first ever fraternity division of the Step-Off,” Shawn Miller, senior from Benton, said. “Even though we didn’t take home the trophy, we just tried to have fun and get a few cheers and even laughs.”

Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity won the fraternity division, Alpha Sigma Alpha won the sorority division, and the Mozz Dance Company won the independent division.

“Mozz Dance Company had the theme of being at an elementary school,” Bailey Murphy, sophomore from Louisville, said. “We took each of our routines and connected them to a school day. For example one of our step routines consisted of us singing the ABC’s while stepping.”

“The best part about participating the Alpha Step Off was Mozz being able to come together and show case our talents outside of just dancing,” Steve Saunders, junior from Murray, said.

One of the main purposes of every philanthropy event is the charity that it supported.

“The best part is helping the children,” Rowland said. “The Step Off is one of the only times you see Caucasian Americans and African Americans working together for a common cause.”

Mike Young, Assistant Vice President of Student Affairs, cuts loose and steps with fellow faculty members. The audience went wild when the faculty threw off their robes and revealed themselves.

Alpha Sigma Alpha ends their show with a dramatic pose. The girls practiced long hours and worked hard to put together their glamorous costumes.

Brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon use walkers as props in their show. They placed second in the fraternity division.

Racer Rally

SGA sponsors highly attended back to school event

The Curris Center was filled with students carrying pizza and balloons racing from one area to the next to make it to the next event they wanted to participate in.

The Student Government Association sponsored Racer Rally with a variety of activities to encourage students to stay in Murray for the weekend and support the football team at their first home game.

The rally offered a variety of fun activities including dodge ball, a raffle, Tango the Clown, karaoke, a drive-in movie and a concert.

Ten students won prizes from the raffle. The prizes included a Sprite cooler, a multipurpose bag, a bike jersey, T-shirts and cook books.

Tango the Clown was in the Curris Center Rocking Chair Lounge. Tango gave away balloons that were shaped like flowers, hearts and other designs.

Several students formed groups to participate in dodge ball.

"It was fun," Tabitha Rickermann, junior from Chicago, said. "We didn't have dodge ball where I went to school."

"The dodge ball was something different," Richard Rowland, senior from Louisville, said. "I wish I had known how to sign up, I would've."

Matt Wertz and Tara Leigh Cobble performed in the Curris Center Stables.

"I had a blast at the Curris Center hanging out with the Racers and would love to come back," Cobble, acoustic folk/rock songwriter-singer, said. "They were very enthusiastic."

The Mozz Dance Team had approximately 20 members perform in the Curris Center Dance Lounge.

"We did it not just to entertain, but to show diversity," Eryn Murray, senior from Lexington, said.

Other groups that were involved included the Racer Band, Racer Girls, cheerleaders, and the National Pan-Hellenic Council. The National Pan-Hellenic Council is the governing body for the African American fraternities and sororities.

Three of the members of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc. performed a step presentation in the Dance Lounge. Richard Rowland, Marteze Hammonds and Marcus Lykes represented their fraternity as well as the National Pan-Hellenic Council.

"We were asked to do a step presentation for the university," Rowland said. "It's like a promotion for us raising money for the March of Dimes and showing our support for the Murray State Racers."

And The Winner is...

The gentlemen of MSU take to the runway.

Applause and amazement filled Lovett Auditorium as each of the guys nominated for Mr. MSU came out onto the stage with one of the “dolls” of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority dressed in elegant formal dresses.

For the past 24 years, organizations have nominated men for Mr. MSU to help support AOPi and their national philanthropy, arthritis research. The theme for the 2004 Mr. MSU pageant was Guys and Dolls.

“So far, every guy that gets nominated has gotten to participate, but if we begin to receive more than 20 or so applications, we will have to add a preliminary interview process to narrow down the number of participants,” Amanda Carter, AOPi’s Philanthropic Chair, said.

Out of the 19 contestants who participated, Paul Ditterline, nominated by Alpha Delta Pi, was crowned Mr. MSU.

“I was extremely surprised when my name was called,” Paul Ditterline, senior from Henderson, said.

“My sisters and I felt Paul would be a great candidate for Mr. MSU and represent our sorority well,” Chasidy King, senior from Benton, said.

Ditterline was proud that ADPi had nominated him and that he had a chance to represent their sorority.

“Paul did a wonderful job and he just happened to do so while representing ADPi,” King said.

Marshall Welch won the best legs competition, the award for crowd appeal and was 3rd runner up.

All of the contestants seemed to have a great time and enjoy getting to know each other and the members of AOPi.

“It was a fun time and the AOPi’s worked us pretty hard,” Scott Ellison, senior from Belleville, Ill., said.

The guys voted and Kyser Lough won the award for the most congeniality.

“Mr. Congeniality has always been a part of the Mr. MSU pageant, however the best legs competition was added in the past few years,” Carter said.

“I think that Mr. MSU is a very good philanthropic event,” Ditterline said. “All of the students seem to really look forward to it.”

Students not only enjoyed participating in the event, they enjoyed watching the event, too.

Many students attend Mr. MSU every year. They look forward to it and it is one of the major topics of discussion on campus because it has a big impact on the campus community.

Said Ditterline: “I think it’s a big part of a Murray student’s life and that is why I am so proud to have won.”

Amanda Carter, Alpha Omicron Pi's Philanthropic Chair, presents Marshall Welch with his award. Welch won best legs, crowd appeal and placed in the top five.

kanye WEST

A hush fell over the crowd when the lights in the RSEC were turned off. Everyone held his or her breath in suspense to see who would be opening for Grammy award winning hip-hop artist Kanye West. To most everyone's surprise the first person on stage was West himself. Many had taken for granted that there would be no opening act.

"The Concert was off the hook! I was singing every song that he had," Justin Hill, senior from Marion, said. Most everyone was singing along knowing that no one could be heard over West.

West sang almost every song on his debut album "College Dropout." The crowd especially enjoyed his better known songs such as, "All Falls Down," "Through the Wire," "Jesus Walks" and "Slow Jamz." However, the crowd also enjoyed being introduced to some of his unreleased songs like, "Get 'em High," "We Don't Care," and "School Spirit."

There was some controversy before West's arrival, which started with a letter to the Murray State News expressing concert about some of West's lyrics and calling him "thug trash." Students were quick to jump to his defense.

"He is nothing like a typical rapper," Andrea Lear, sophomore from Covington, said. "He does not rely on slang terms for women and murder to entertain. He talks about his personal life experiences. Isn't that what an artist does?"

There was also some concern about his album being titled "College Dropout." Students seemed to feel that was also unwarranted.

"It is personal expression and college students are not so easily swayed that they would drop out of Murray State because they had a singer whose album was entitled "College Dropout," Lear said. "He may have dropped out of college but he sets an example for those who chose not to attend to go to college by striving for his goals. He is still doing something with his life."

Lasting barely an hour the concert ended all too soon for some who attended.

"I thought it was way too short," Knickman said. "It could have been better."

Others enjoyed the concert despite the length.

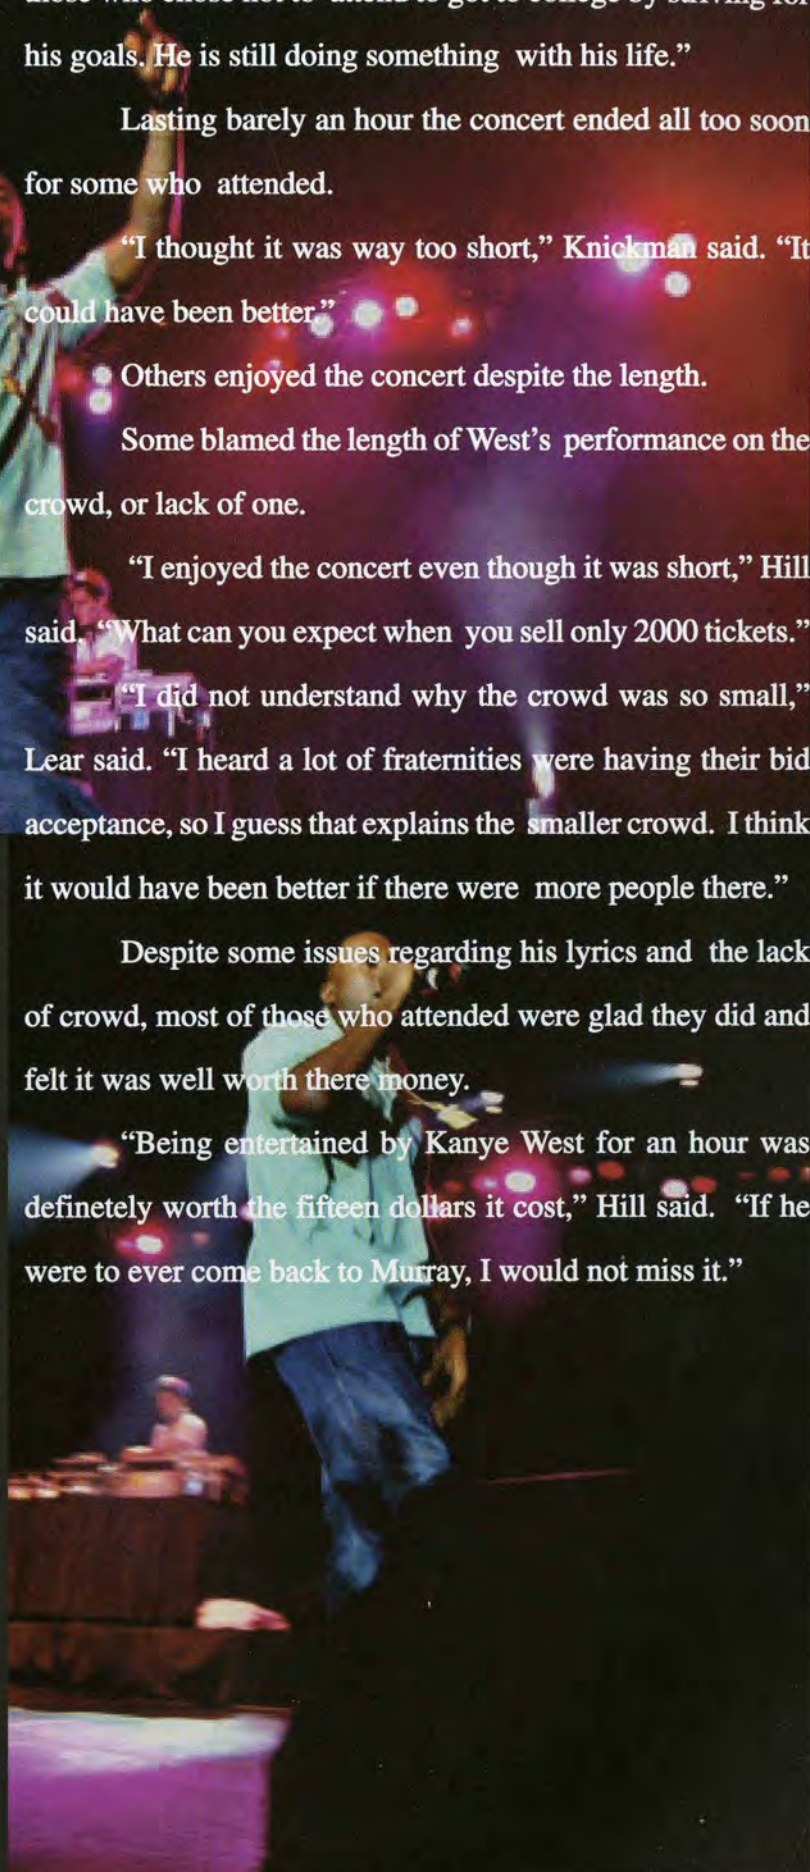

Some blamed the length of West's performance on the crowd, or lack of one.

"I enjoyed the concert even though it was short," Hill said. "What can you expect when you sell only 2000 tickets."

"I did not understand why the crowd was so small," Lear said. "I heard a lot of fraternities were having their bid acceptance, so I guess that explains the smaller crowd. I think it would have been better if there were more people there."

Despite some issues regarding his lyrics and the lack of crowd, most of those who attended were glad they did and felt it was well worth there money.

"Being entertained by Kanye West for an hour was definately worth the fifteen dollars it cost," Hill said. "If he were to ever come back to Murray, I would not miss it."

Brad Paisley

"This song is for all you Kentucky rednecks out there who can't keep your trucks clean," Brad Paisley announced to a screaming audience before performing the title track of his new album, "Mud on the Tires." Paisley performed that and many of his other hits at his November concert.

The show opened with American Idol contestant Josh Gracin. He was well known for his military service in the Marines. He came on stage and performed his first single, "I Want to Live."

The former Marine involved the audience in his show by encouraging them to stand up and be loud. Gracin threw towels, drumsticks and guitar picks to the screaming fans.

After intermission, the lights went down and Brad Paisley appeared onstage wearing a Murray State t-shirt. He opened his show by performing his hit song "Wrapped Around." Paisley performed some of his other songs before introducing his band to the crowd. Paisley joked that all the members were from Kentucky, including the drummer who was a Murray State graduate.

One of the funniest moments in the show came when Paisley performed on stage by himself with only a guitar. He said he was going to sing a new song he had written. He began by singing about how his wife did not want diamonds or flowers, she only wanted him to do one thing to show real love, put the toilet seat down.

One of the most anticipated moments of the night came when he performed his award-winning duet with Alison Krauss, "Whiskey Lullaby." While some people hoped Krauss would have made an appearance, they only saw her image on the screen as the song's video played in the background.

Paisley closed the show by performing his songs "Celebrity" and "I'm Gonna Miss Her," also known as the fishing song. The videos for those songs played on the screen as he performed.

The award-winning artist came back on stage for a one-song encore, getting the entire audience on their feet.

"I thought it was an awesome concert and I wish they would have more country concerts like this one." said Jenni Gregory

Murray State Gone Country

Students and country music fans turned out March 31, 2005 to welcome one of country's hottest new bands, Emerson Drive, to Lovett Auditorium. The group entertained the crowd with well-known hits, such as "Should Be Sleeping" and "Fall Into Me," as well as plenty of new material.

"I only knew a couple of their songs, but I'm glad I went to the concert because I loved all the songs they sang from their new CD," Kelly Riley, junior from Mayfield, said.

Emerson Drive's newest album, What If?, was released in 2004 and was their second album for DreamWorks Nashville. The band's first release self-titled, Emerson Drive, received great reviews and excellent record sales. Emerson Drive was named the Academy of Country Music's Top New Vocal Group/Duo in 2003, and Billboard's Top New Artist of the Year in 2002.

Opening for Emerson Drive was Murray State's own Miranda Barnett. Barnett performed such hits as "When You Say Nothing at All," by Allison Krauss, and Jewel's "You Were Meant for Me." Barnett also performed an original song about her mother, who died in 2004.

"Miranda was incredible," Brooke Harris, senior from Mayfield, said. "She will be a star one day, and it is great that she got her start at MSU."

The combination of a local performer and a country sensation drew a large crowd to MSU's Lovett Auditorium. Many students who knew Barnett, as well as fans of Emerson Drive were in attendance.

"I think it is great that we had the opportunity to see a well-known group like Emerson Drive at Murray," Riley said. "More students should take advantage of the great acts, such as this one, that are brought to MSU."

Bush Retains Power

Elections provide political involvement for students

Sixteen hours after all the polls closed in Kentucky, Senator John Kerry called President George W. Bush to concede. After four years in office, Bush began his second term as the President of the United States in January 2005.

For many Murray State University students the 2004 elections were a milestone. The elections afforded students the opportunity to voice their opinion about who would run their country for the next four years.

“Obviously the President has the most important position in the country and arguably the world,” Stephanie McDaniels, senior from Murray, said. “It is our right, obligation and duty to make our voices heard when the decisions he will make will impact not only how we live today, but also what we can expect from the future. It was the first time I got to vote in a presidential election, so I was very excited and nervous.”

The lengthy and expensive campaign was one for the record books and made an obvious difference in the outcome of the election. President Bush spent time on his campaign trail in local areas such as Paducah and Cape Girardeau, Mo. These local stops helped many young voters make a final decision.

“When the most powerful man in the country comes to your town, it shows that he cares about more than just what happens in Washington,” Sara Swiney, junior from Cape Girardeau, Mo. said.

Several students and organizations at Murray State voiced their opinions during the elections by making time to for small rallies, debates, voter-registration drives and protests.

The election was close through the night and came to a stand still with Kerry holding 247 Electoral College votes and Bush holding 252 Electoral College votes, while the battleground states of Ohio and Florida counted their votes. Finally, both states were called for Bush, which gave him a total of 274 Electoral College votes and decided the election.

In interviews after the election, Kerry said that he wanted to work closely with President Bush to bring relationships closer and break down bi-partisanship in the United States Senate. He said that he believed in the country and the voice of each American voter.

According to the Rock The Vote Web site, a Web site devoted to getting youth to voice their opinions, 1,433,569 new young people registered to vote. Despite the number registered to vote only about 20% of people under 25 registered to vote actually voted.

These numbers were disheartening to many, but especially to members of each campaign who were counting on the youthful support of those voters. Many Kerry supporters believed that with the support he had from Hollywood, the success of the documentary Fahrenheit 9/11 and the number of newly registered voters he would win the election. Despite the Democratic loss there is hope for the next four years.

Said Swiney: “Hopefully with the support of Kerry and others Bush will be able to also strengthen the economy and provide a strong establishment for us and future generations.”

Members of the Students for Social Justice hold a protest outside the Curris Center the night before the elections. Other organizations hosted election-related events as well, including the SGA voter registration drive and showings of Fahrenheit 9/11 and FahrenHYPE 9/11

MOZZ Video Dance-Off generates campus participation

Dancing the night away for MOZZ, campus organizations participated in the campus wide Dance Off and had a “Thriller” of a good time with a special performance from the MOZZ team during intermission.

MOZZ Dance Company presented the first annual Video Dance-Off in mid November in Lovett Auditorium to raise money for their spring show, the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation and canned goods for Calloway County Needline.

The Video Dance-Off consisted of eight competitive teams impersonating different music videos. Each team was assigned a coach who was a member of the MOZZ Dance Company. The organization selected a video and mimicked the dance movements while the coach acted as a facilitator.

Four judges, with dance experience, chose the winner. The judges viewed the videos before the performance to ensure the groups had followed the movements in the music video.

The videos that were chosen by the organizations varied from “Beat It” by Michael Jackson performed by Elizabeth College to “If You Had My Love” by Jennifer Lopez performed by Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority.

The first place winner was Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity who performed Usher’s “You Don’t Have to Call.”

The second place winner was Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. They performed “All Nite (Don’t Stop)” by Janet Jackson.

Third place went to Alpha Omicron Pi sorority with their performance of “I’m a Slave 4 U” by Britney Spears.

“It was incredibly rewarding to receive an award at the event because of the time and effort we put into learning our routine,” Amanda Carter, senior from Murray, said. “The competition was very stiff, so we were excited to place among all the great dancers.”

Other performers that evening were Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority, Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity and White College. “It is really amazing how after the long nights, busy practices and conflicts of opinions during our practices that a three minute performance can make it all worth it,” Tiffany Martin, junior from Henderson, said. “Looking back, the Dance Off was great.”

The highlight of evening was the performance by MOZZ Dance Company at intermission. They performed “Thriller” by Michael Jackson.

There were over 700 people who attended the Dance Off. MOZZ was able to donate a significant amount of money to Juvenile Diabetes Research, they also collected approximately 350 canned goods for Needline and were able to raise enough money to have a spring show.

Local Bands rock on MSU campus

Murray State University had more than enough talented, creative and intelligent people, but when several of them got together, things could get wild. Several local bands had been introduced to each other through MSU, their common passion for performing created a loyal Murray fan base.

One such band was Cellar Door. Cellar Door was a dream and a product of hard work since the summer of 2002. Members were Adam Bittel, senior from Utica, Shane Smith, Kevin Ethridge, Brandon Passmore, and Jon Burris.

Cellar Door played venues such as the Stables in Murray and Martin, Tenn., the Rock Angel in Paducah, Fort Campbell, Clarksville, but they were not limited to local areas and provided entertainment all around the area.

Bittel said while the music of his band was not really accepted locally, they still found a very loyal fan base. The band began as a cover band, but realized they wanted write their own material and produce the music.

"The fact of the matter is that we wanted to be accepted for our music," Bittel said. "Mainly, this band strives to reach those who experience problems in their daily lives, we've experienced almost every emotion, every pain, every thought our fans have been through."

Bittel said the biggest goal of the band was yet to be reached.

"The most exciting part is playing, to use the stage as our outlet for all of life's ups and downs," Bittel said. "The biggest accomplishment as a band is proving to everyone we're not going to give up on what we started. We'll keep giving our all until one day our name will be remembered."

Another local band was The Dishwashers who got their beginning in Paducah in 1999. The band members are Ryan Whittaker, senior from Sparks, Nev., Paul Latvit, freshman from Chicago, and Andrew Turner, from Mayfield. Along with the local venues, they also played in New York City at CBGB, the world's most famous underground club.

The horror rock band had a $3000 record deal in Nashville on Compressor Records, 7" on Dee-minus records, 7" on Pugface Records, and have been on two national tours.

"Our goal is to solely do the band for a living," Whittaker said.

Other local bands have provided Murray State students with a broad range of music and entertainment as well. Given, Hoosier Daddy and several others also played locally. The Big Apple Café hosted different bands weekly such as the ever popular Clarence Dobbins, a cover band.

Working Hard for the money

Students take advantage of on-campus job opportunities

Every Tuesday afternoon Kristi Edwards dreaded going to work. In her second semester working at Winslow Dining Hall, Edwards, Junior from Quincy Il. did not enjoy many things about her job.

"I generally hate working," Edwards said. "They have a tendency to move you from job to job randomly, at least me anyway."

Edwards did not enjoy when she was assigned to a certain job either though.

"It is kind of stressful if you are serving," Edwards said. "There are so many coming through. The worst is when people just point at food or talk really quiet.

Not all the students felt the same way about working in food services. Ashley Hagan also worked in Winslow during the 2004-2005 school year. Hagan, sophomore from Owensboro enjoyed her job.

"I love getting to see all kinds of people from all kinds of places."

Andrea Graham enjoyed her job in Fast Track for the same reasons as Hagan enjoyed working in Winslow.

"I love meeting new people because I wouldn't get exposed to that number of people just going to class and living in the dorm," Graham, Junior from Belize said. "Working at Fast Track, I get to know more people.

Graham however does have a few complaints about her job. She also often gets frustrated with students knowing they are over their allowed amount and trying to get by with it anyway.

"You know you are a nickel over. Now, what should you have done?" Graham said.

One thing that all three food service employees agreed on is that working on Campus is the most convenient way to earn money while on campus.

"It is convenient and lenient. They are willing to work with you when you need to be off for school reasons." Hagan said.

"They are really good about that actually," Edward said. "It is probably the best thing about Winslow.

"The hours are fine," Graham said. "I have the opportunity to pick the hours that I work."

There were many advantages to working on-campus. Many preferred such a flexible job to the alternative.

Said Edwards: "At least it is not factory work."

Bridging the Gap

Nobel Prize Winner F. W. De Klerk Comes to Murray State

"I am a Kentucky bourbon man," said F.W. de Klerk, the former President of South Africa, in the opening of his speech at Lovett Auditorium on Thursday night.

He explained that he was not interested in horses, but he did like Kentucky Fried Chicken, bourbon, and tobacco.

After an introduction by university President F. King Alexander, de Klerk took the stage to discuss "Bridging the Gap: Globalization without Isolation."

Globalization is actually reshaping the world we live in, said de Klerk, who helped end the racial segregation system of Apartheid in South Africa. He discussed how everyone now wants fashions from Paris, cars from Germany and computers from the U.S.

The 1994 Time Magazine Man of the Year was afraid that no one was directing the globalization movement and it may cause an even greater divide among rich and poor countries. He cited an example of how Ford motor company's annual sales were greater than the Gross National Product of 38 sub-Saharan African countries combined.

The 1993 Nobel Peace Prize Winner believed that globalization required three essential responses from the U.S. First, multi-lateralism: a global response to global issues. He did not believe that any nation can act alone. Second, equity needed to be enforced to ensure that globalization took place in a fair and reasonable manner and that no nation was left behind. Third, the world needed to be safe for diversity. Cultures should lay the framework for our personal identities and personalities.

De Klerk, who was brought to MSU by the Student Government Association, used language as an example of changing cultures. He stated that half of the world's 6,000 languages would disappear in the next century. Also, 73% of all websites were in English. The days of the homogenous nation state have gone and we need to be a more culturally diverse population, de Klerk said.

De Klerk, who spoke to 1,325 people in Lovett Auditorium, said there were two main causes of conflict today. First was poverty, the underfed were struggling against those who lived off the fat of the land. Second was failure to accommodate diversity and the conflicts between cultural and ethnic groups.

De Klerk ended his speech with a quote from John Locke, "No man is an island of itself," to which he added, "no country should be an island of itself."

After receiving a standing ovation from the audience, de Klerk held a question and answer session with SGA President Jessica Reed, who read questions provided by students.

De Klerk spoke at the university as part of a 2005 lecture series to honor the 50th anniversary of the first African-American student at MSU. He was given an honorary doctorate in humane letters by President Alexander.

The ladies of MSU bring the roaring 20's back to life

Fifteen outstanding women came together the night of April 2nd for the 35th Annual Miss Murray State University Scholarship Pageant held in Lovett Auditorium. As a whole the contestants displayed elegance, poise, grace and exemplified leadership and campus involvement.

Jodi Martin, senior from Marion, was Campus Activities Board official and Executive Director of the pageant. She was in charge of organizing the production, and began planning the event weeks in advance.

"It was an honor and privilege to be a part of Murray State's tradition," Martin said. "I think this pageant has always recognized outstanding women at Murray State and has given them an opportunity to be showcased and receive a scholarship."

In the fall, each organization on campus was invited to nominate four young women for participation in the pageant. Preliminary interviews in November conducted by a panel of judges selected the pageant's 15 contestants from over 80 applicants.

Rehearsals for the pageant began at the end of January, and each contestant prepared for the big night by learning choreography to the opening dance and selecting dresses for the evening gown competition.

When the curtains opened on the night of the pageant, the contestants, wearing black "flapper" skirts and silk blouses, entertained the audience by dancing to "I've Got Rhythm."

Five finalists were chosen at the end of the evening by the panel of 3 judges based on their performance during the night and a preliminary interview held earlier that day.

The top five included Charissa Acree, junior, from Fulton, Ashley Kramer, senior, from Newburg, Ind., Tiffany Wilson, senior, from Hardinsburg, Megan Claussen, junior, from Louisville and LeeAnna Green, junior from Mayfield.

Based on her answer to an impromptu question, Green was crowned the 2005 Miss MSU and received an $850 scholarship. The other four finalists received scholarships as well.

Acree was chosen as Most Photogenic based on a picture submitted before the pageant and Elizabeth Cawein, junior from Memphis, was chosen by her fellow contestants as Miss Congeniality.

"Miss MSU was one of my most memorable experiences in my two years at Murray State. All of the women involved inspired me in so many ways," Acree said. "This is something I will take with me when I leave Murray State."

As Miss MSU 2005, Green's obligations included involvement in the 2006 Miss MSU scholarship pageant and to help with Homecoming and other SGA/CAB events.

"It was a lot of fun," Amanda Birkner, senior from McLeansboro, Ill., contestant number two, said. "I made real friendships and I learned a lot about myself. Overall, it was an experience of a lifetime that I will never forget."

Freedom Of The Presses

Murray State Journalists exercise first amendment rights

Newspapers provided a reliable form of news for years, and whether it was your local paper or the New York Times, they offered the news in a comforting fashion. Murray State University's student produced paper, The Murray State News, was certainly no exception in 2004-2005 when they provided a paper for readers to enjoy.

As with all organizations, The News underwent a number of leadership changes at the start of the fall semester. Vanessa Childers, junior journalism major from Mason, Ohio, became the editor-in-chief. She took the reins of this paper and began her own overhaul.

Many of the changes to the paper were innovative. The paper had new fonts, new section heads, a redesigned flag, a smaller issue, a new grid system, and for the first time in history The News was in color.

"Everyone seemed to like the changes and we thought it was a good transition," Childers said.

Throughout the course of the year, not everyone had nice things to say about The Murray State News. In early spring, there was a controversial front-page story about the "Vagina Monologues," which was a prominent campus-event taking place in the Curris Center Theater.

The coverage of the story inevitably lead to public uproar about decency and decorum. The public was so involved with opinions that The Murray State News used the next week's issue to explain and defend themselves, citing the newsworthiness of the story and the First Amendment.

"We were never mad that people were upset," Childers said. "We were disappointed that people couldn't come to us. It hurts when people don't like what you do."

The ensuing turmoil, whether justified or not, sparked a new campus paper in the spring, the Campus Courier. This paper provided a new alternative to The Murray State News, which was seen as a positive by Childers and her staff.

"It's not the first time an underground paper has tried to be started," Childers said. "We took it as a wake-up call but it's not a competition, it's just journalism."

After the bump in the road, The Murray State News hit its stride again and finished the year strong. The Campus Courier, despite having heart and wherewithal, had trouble producing a competitive hard-copy campus paper due to funding issues. However, they did succeed in providing an excellent on-line news service to students.

Laura Weiter, junior from Louisville, is perplexed by a sign for an up-start campus newspaper, Campus Courier. The Campus Courier kept a weekly online edition and an off and on print edition.

Tsunami Relief

Students come together to aid victims

On December 26, 2004, a series of devastating tsunamis hit South Asia, affecting 11 countries and hundreds of thousands of people. The final death toll was over 226,000.

Many disaster relief efforts were put into action immediately. Students at Murray State felt the need to participate in the efforts to help raise money.

Hester Residential College held a penny war contest between the floors to help raise money for the disaster relief fund. Buckets were placed at the front desk with floor numbers on them. The residents dropped change in the buckets. The pennies were worth positive points and quarters, dimes and nickels were worth negative points. The floor with the most positive points won. Not only was the money raised for a good cause but the activity helped build community spirit among the Hester residents.

"I feel that students wanted to help," Valerie Reeder, junior from Paducah, said. "It was an easy way for them to get involved. It made me feel like I was able to help in my own small way."

The idea for the penny wars competition came from John (Lance) Lee, junior of Scottsville.

"Even though we didn't raise an incredible amount of money, our effort was still a good one," Lee said. "We ended up receiving around $144 in donations, which is fairly good for college students with little extra money."

The money Hester raised was donated to the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). UNICEF was one of the many professional organizations that had assisted those whose lives were impacted and forever changed by the natural disaster.

"I felt that we, as compared to the rest of the world, rich Americans had an obligation to contribute financially in some way to the effort," Lee said. "Just a dollar donated to the cause is more than lots of people around the world earn in an entire day. So if we could raise just a little money it would be a nice effort."

Other campus organizations set up tables in the Curris Center to accept donations for the tsunami. An international dinner was also held with proceeds going to victims of the tsunami. Omicron Delta Kappa is a leadership honor society that supports and builds libraries in the regions where the tsunamis hit.

"I know it's not much," Jessica Ferguson, junior ODK member from Mayfield, said. "But if reading helps them take their minds off what has happened to them, then we contributed to their lives in a positive way."

Biology Building Begins New Era in Science at Murray State

Science has come a long way in the past century. The ever-expanding world of technology has reached into the field of science and made possible things we never dreamed. The department of science at Murray State is no exception.

When the science program was established in 1923 in the ground floor of Wrather, it had two rooms, two teachers, and offered classes in biology, zoology and botany.

In 2004, the College of Science, Engineering and Technology at Murray State had expanded to become one of the largest colleges on campus, Neil Weber, Dean of the Department of Science, said. This growth, coupled with ever advancing technology that created new instruments and techniques for scientific research, called for changes to be made within the college.

While the years of the depression caused enrollment numbers to drop, the number of students majoring in areas of science continued to climb, until it was evident that a new facility was needed to accommodate the department.

John Wesley Carr wrote in Recollections of Murray State College, "Board of Regents decided to begin construction of a science building" in 1947 and "planned for the building to be built across from Carr Health." Construction of the building began in 1948 and was completed in 1950. The new building housed the departments of agriculture biological science, physics and home economics.

But the Department of Science continued to grow, until it had almost outgrown the newer Science Building. In 1968 a 2nd addition was completed and named after Dr. W.E. Blackburn, who had served as a professor of chemistry and dean of the school of arts and sciences.

In 1966, Murray State achieved University status, and numbers in student enrollment continued to climb. With time, Blackburn Science building had aged, and beginning in the late 1990's, it became apparent that new accommodations would be required to keep the college up-to-date with technological and academic advancements within the field of science.

Tom Timmons, head of the Department of Biology, said plans for a new science building began around 1998, while construction on the new building did not begin until 2002.

In Fall 2004, the first level of the new Biology complex had been completed and students looked forward to beginning classes there in the spring. Once completed, the 58,000 square-foot building would contain 10 classrooms and teaching labs, 19 research labs and 24 offices and conference rooms, according to a pamphlet released by the University.

"Our enrollment is up 5 percent, while growth for the University is 2 percent," Weber said. "Our college is one of the larger colleges on campus. We can expect to serve almost 9,000 students each semester, due in large part to the general education classes required by the university."

When the third and final new building is completed, Weber said the department will have the technology necessary to conduct studies in fields such as genetics, which require special analytical equipment and microscopes.

Today, the College of Science, Engineering and Technology houses eight separate departments, which have expanded to include math and statistics, geosciences, and the Center for Telecommunications. Weber was quick to point out that these areas are growing at a rapid rate due to their importance to the economy.

Said Weber: "Universities all over the state are making changes to accommodate these fields."

MARY KATHRYN CASH

INVOLVEMENT INFLUENCES CAMPUS ORGANIZATIONS

Determination and organization coupled with ability to have fun characterized Mary Kathryn Cash.

Cash, senior from Fancy Farm, influenced almost every Murray State University organization.

Cash was involved with many organizations, from the Honors Program to Regents College organizations, during her four years at MSU, but she said three organizations held a special place in her heart.

"The Newman House was the first organization I became involved with at MSU," Cash said. "Before school even started my freshman year, I received a letter from the campus minister inviting me to the back-to-school events at the Newman House. Before long, someone invited me to a planning meeting and I found myself immersed in the activities."

Bill Duffield, Newman House campus minister, said Cash was one of the hardest workers he knew.

"Sometimes it's really almost scary to watch her pull out planners and hear her talk about meetings," Duffield said. "I do wonder when she studies and sleeps, but given she's a very good student she seems to have a pretty good grasp on being highly organized."

Cash said she became involved with another campus organization, Rotaract, because of her involvement with the high school level Rotary organization, Interact.

"As with the Newman House, I immediately got involved with the projects of Rotaract and found myself elected for president my sophomore year," Cash said. "I was a little nervous taking on the role of president in two organizations [Newman House and Rotaract] when I was just a sophomore, but as it turned out, that was just the beginning of my leadership roles."

After three semesters at MSU, Cash became a junior and applied for Omicron Delta Kappa, a national leadership honor society for students with junior status and above.

"My terms as president of Rotaract and Newman House were coming to an end and I was looking for something else to devote more time to even though I still planned to be involved with the other organizations," Cash said.

With the encouragement of an advisor, Cash decided to run for president of ODK and was elected for the first time at the end of her sophomore year.

"ODK has been an interesting experience to work with because I am basically working with all of the other leaders," Cash said. "ODK also poses unique challenges because the members are so busy."

ODK offered Cash leadership opportunities larger than just MSU. Cash became the Province X Student Director. Province X consists of Kentucky, Tennessee and southern Indiana.

Said Duffield: "Mary Kathryn is highly determined, so much so, that when she says she's going to do something, you pretty much just expect it to happen...and it usually does."

FOUR COURSES TO SUCCESS

Mock cock tails, hors d'oeuvres and a four-course dinner may sound more like a home economics class than an event sponsored by Murray State University's College of Business and Public Affairs, but "Four Courses to Success" was one innovative way to offer students real-life business experience and education.

The program was used to give detailed explanations of how to approach an interview meal and enhance dining etiquette when students enter into a competitive job market. Amy Agyeman, proprietor of Interview Etiquette, Murray, Ky., facilitated the educational workshop.

"Based on my many years in academia and on feedback from our alumni and business community, it has become evident that proper etiquette is a weakness in our graduates as they begin interviewing for their first job. We only have one opportunity to make a first impression, and if we don't make a good one, it can be very costly," Dannie Harrison, dean of the College of Business and Public Affairs.

For many students the "Four Courses to Success" was a way to get ahead of the competition and prepare for every challenge and opportunity given in the hunt for a job. The three hour event began with a Mock Cocktail party where hors d'oeuvres and sparkling grape juice were available. Students had to choose which foods were "safe" to eat and taught to remember to always keep a hand available to meet other people.

"Ms. Agyeman was clear in telling us that the party was to meet and greet not to eat. We are in the social setting to make connections, so it is necessary to always be available to shake hands and not to have food in your mouth or all over your clothes," Kyla DeHay, said.

The second part of the dinner was a four course meal with detailed instruction for each course including silverware usage, appropriate items to order, how to communicate with the wait staff and how to follow-up with potential employers after the interview. The interactive setting was open to students questions at the end of each course and included how to excuse yourself from the table among many other quirky questions.

Agyeman said meal interviews are not merely a social situation, but a chance for a first impression for the employer to observe the demeanor of a prospective employee and see how well they would fit into their business and how well they would represent their business. Also, the situation allows for the potential employee to gain information about the business and decide if it is a place they would be comfortable and conducive for he/she to work in.

"During the meal, every aspect of your demeanor will be scrutinized to ensure you will fit within the organization and its client base," Agyeman said. "The employer seeks to confirm your ability to manage yourself and represent the organization with self-discipline and dignity."

"Four Courses to Success" allowed a number of students to gain an experience that cannot be taught in the classroom that will only help better their chances of being successful after graduation when looking for a job.

"By attending 'Four Courses to Success' I feel more comfortable with my ability to interact in a situation where I need to network as well as conduct myself with poise in a dinner interview setting," Jessica Jones, senior from Wickliffe, said. "The experience was unique and applicable to many MSU students."

LIFE LESSONS

STUDENT TEACHERS GAIN ASSURANCE

Most Murray State University seniors finish their education gaining instruction by professor in a classroom, but those students who hope to graduate with a degree certifying them to teach are in the shoes of those providing the instruction. Student teaching is a special requirement that provides students with hands-on experience that allows graduates to be better prepared as a beginning teacher.

Student teaching occurs the last semester before students can graduate with teacher certification. Before student teaching, students must do several things.

The semester before student teaching MSU students must interview to make sure they are prepared to be placed in a school as a student teacher. Also they must complete 18 hours of a practicum, which is 18 hours of teaching a class, as well a week seminar before the semester of student teaching begins. Students can pick the top three schools they would like to be placed in, but it cannot be a school in which they have attended or worked in.

"I am looking forward to student teaching because I believe it is where I will gain the most information to make me a better teacher and be more prepared after I graduate," said Allison Wesmoland, senior business education major from Marion.

Student teaching allows MSU students to have a supervising teacher that can help guide them and give them valuable to information that will help them be better prepared for the real classroom.

"I loved student teaching because it reaffirmed that I had chosen the best profession for me," said Beth Jarboe, elementary education graduate from Owensboro. "I also had a new mentor because my supervising teacher was very helpful and provided tons of encouragement. I feel like having the actual classroom experience will help me be a much better teacher."

Student teaching gives students an idea of what to expect from the real world of teaching. They have to be at school by 7:30 a.m., have lessons prepared, stay after school as needed, and basically take on the role of teacher.

"It really was a different lifestyle. It is much different than just attending classes, and it is important to understand that before you get into it," Jarboe said. "Some people are cut out for getting up early and things. It really helps with time management skills because not only are you being a "teacher" but you are still a Murray State student and you have to being able to handle all the work."

Student teaching also provides students with information that may be valuable for the Praxis, the test that determines if someone can be certified to teach in Kentucky.

"I am looking forward to student teaching because I hope to gain reassurance as well as a better education," Wesmoland said.

NATIONAL SCIENCE TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

One of the greatest aspects of college life was striving to learn more and pass that knowledge on to others. Murray State students gained this experience through a broad range of student organizations. One such organization was the National Science Teachers Association (NSTA).

This organization was made up of students who were studying to become elementary and middle school science teachers. Locally, it started on September 18, 1999 as the first “student-only” chapter in the nation.

Originally, the NSTA was founded for adults already teaching science, but Murray State dared to be different. Founder and advisor, Dr. Tom Lough, associate professor in the Department of Education, made a great impact on the education of science both on and off campus.

Beyond Murray State’s campus, the NSTA existed with over 55,000 members nationwide. It was founded in 1944 and was headquartered in Arlington, Va. as the largest organization in the world committed to promoting excellence and innovation in science teaching.

The NSTA, nationally and locally, developed position statements on issues such as teacher preparation, laboratory science, use of animals in the classroom and many more such issues they deemed relevant to their cause as science educators.

“As a direct result of their NSTA Student Chapter participation, our recent graduates were professionally active before they began their science teaching careers,” Lough said. “They have gone on to promote the NSTA and science teaching within their school districts, make presentations at NSTA conferences, and encourage others to consider science teaching as a career choice.”

Despite being primarily about exchanging ideas, the NSTA also gave students a chance to give back to the university. Students were constantly encouraged to participate in the NSTA fundraiser that included collecting and recycling ink jet cartridges on campus. This process helped the offices on campus dispose of their ink in an environmentally safe way while also providing valuable funds for the NSTA organization.

“We consider our fundraiser a big deal,” Lough said. “We make it very easy for Murray State to recycle some of their hazardous materials and we make a little money at the same time. It’s a great deal for both the campus and the NSTA.”

The NSTA provided students at Murray State a chance to exchange ideas about their field and it gave students the chance for professional development before graduation. The organization differentiated Murray State’s science education majors from other schools because of the professionalism NSTA provided.

EACH DAY, WATERS BEGINS HER PRACTICE BY FINE-TUNING HER SCALES. THE FLUTE HAS BEEN HER PASSION SINCE MIDDLE SCHOOL.

BY SCRUTINIZING HER MUSIC, WATERS PERFECTS THE DIFFICULT RUNS. DESPITE HER YOUNG AGE, SHE IS ALREADY AN ACCOMPLISHED MUSICIAN.

FRESHMAN FROM MURRAY, WATERS TAKES A BREAK PRACTICING IN THE JAPANESE GARDEN BEHIND THE FINE ARTS BUILDING. SHE PERFORMED THIS PAST SUMMER AT THE NATIONAL FLUTE ASSOCIATION ANNUAL CONVENTION IN NASHVILLE.

HEATHER WATERS

MUSIC TO MURRAY STATE'S EARS

While many students enjoy their first semester and find ways to ease into the college life and extracurricular activities, freshman, Heather Waters has already started making noise on Murray State's campus.

Waters, from Murray, is a flute performance major. Playing the flute is a passion she said began in middle school, and is something she has worked hard at to become a finely tuned musician.

She already has several outstanding accomplishments. The most recent was her performance at the National Flute Association Annual Convention in Nashville during the summer of 2004.

"It was a genuine honor because few people are selected, and it is only through recommendation," Waters said.

Waters' recommendation was written by Dr. Stephanie Rea, lecturer of music. Rea has been providing Waters with musical guidance since fall 2000.

"She works extremely hard, and like all of the talented musicians who make it, she perseveres through hours of practice and she is very organized," Rea said. "She is curious and doesn't do anything on the surface. Heather researches composers and takes things seriously to become a better performer."

Waters was dually enrolled at MSU and Calloway County High school her senior year and Rea said that she was one of the top music students then and that she continues to expect great things from her.

The Department of Music is one area in the College of Humanities and Fine Arts. Murray State's Department of Music has been a member of the National Association of Schools of Music since 1936 and has graduates that serve as leading musicians in operas, recording artists, professional symphony musicians, jazz educators, instrument technicians, songwriters, church musicians and school music teachers from elementary to the college level.

"I think one of the goals of the music department is to help students learn to understand and respect all types of music, themselves and the world," Rea said. "We provide education and encouragement to help students like Waters succeed."

Waters said she believed the music department would help her grow individually and as a performer, and that it would also provide her with other opportunities to get involved and become a better musician and asset to Murray State.

Along with classes, Waters is also involved in many other activities. She is a member in training for Sigma Alpha Iota music sorority, member of the woodwind quartet, the wind ensemble, orchestra, Campus Lights pit orchestra, and Racer Band.

Waters hopes to graduate in May 2008 and then pursue her masters and doctorate to become a flute professor.

INSIDE THE MIND

... OF A SPORTS FAN

"...no one knows what attracts sports fans to different sporting events..." Dann Wann.

We seek its guidance when we want to understand what's going on in our minds. We look to it for explanations of why and how people do what they do. But psychology is so much more than what we see on Frasier or Dr. Phil. The world of psychology is complex with many different venues and fields for exploration. Dan Wann, a professor of psychology for the College of Business and Public Affairs, has dedicated much of his work in the Department of Psychology to one such field.

Wann said there had been a growing interest in the past five years among businesses and small organizations to understand why the fans of sports do the things they do. When an article about his work with sports fans psychology appeared in the New York Times on August 11, 2000, Wann said companies like the Professional Golf Association and Nike contacted him for help.

"Murray State knows a lot about what attracts people to Murray State. Disney knows all there is to know about why people come to Disney. Wal-Mart knows why people shop at Wal-Mart instead of Target, but no one knows what attracts sports fans to different sporting events," Wann said. "In the last ten years there has been a lot of competition for the sporting dollar. There are so many opportunities for fans to follow sports, whereas there used to be a limited number of choices."

To help the companies and businesses that contacted him, Wann said he helped create questionnaires for surveys. He said once the surveys were completed he reviewed the data collected. The companies then used patterns from the data collected to change their marketing strategies.

Wann's work with large companies was recent, but he said he had been doing this kind of research for almost 20 years.

"I've always been a sports fan myself so it made sense to study other people and what motivates them," Wann said.

Rena Duncan, Dean of the Department of Psychology, said this kind of work was a positive reflection on the department and a motivation for students.

"I think (Wann's) research and activity reflects on our dedication to continuing our understanding of behavior and research," Duncan said. "His students help him run studies and experiments. I think his involvement reflects his dedication to his students."

Wann said his work allowed him to meet very interesting people with new perspectives.

"I think my students think it's pretty cool," Wann said. "I teach a psychology of sports fans class where I explain some of the things I have done. Students think it's interesting because it's a knowledge they wouldn't get otherwise."

Wann said this kind of research was important for students to see because of common misconceptions about the field of psychology.

"I think that most people only know of psychology from what they see in movies...but there is much more to psychology than that," Wann said. "But I have to say that is probably true for most disciplines. The public doesn't realize how much different fields of learning have to offer."

Mary Folie, a graduate student from Symsonia, began working as Wann's graduate assistant in Spring 2004. She said working for Wann opened her eyes to all the possibilities psychology has to offer.

"Working for him has helped me see all the different aspects of psychology," Folie said. "There is so much more to psychology than clinical work, you just have to work for it and find your niche, which is what I think he's done."

Folie assisted Wann by conducting library research and helping run research groups as well as proctor some of his classes.

"He has a lot of respect in his field," Folie said. "There has been a lot of news lately about sports fans and aggression and it's neat to see his take on the subject."

In 2004, the field of sports fan psychology was fairly new and Wann said new information was learned with every new study.

"We're just starting to see patterns," Wann said. "So now we can guess behavior patterns for sports fans, but there is still a lot left to learn."

SONYA BAKER

CARNEGIE DEBUT BROADENS HORIZONS

When Sonya Baker stepped out into the bright lights of the stage and began to sing to the direction of composer Michael Tilson Thomas, she was fulfilling a dream that many professional singers aspire to...a performance at Carnegie Hall. When her moment had passed, she returned to Murray State as an example of how far a lot of hard work and determination could take an individual.

Baker, a professor of music for the Fine Arts Department, described her debut at Carnegie Hall November 2003 as an “amazing” experience. But she readily admitted it was not an opportunity that was dropped into her lap. Instead it was something she had to work very hard to attain.

Baker’s Carnegie experience came in the middle of a personal endeavor: the recording and production of her very own CD. Following two recording sessions in the Spring and Summer of 2003, all of Baker’s songs for her CD had been recorded and awaited editing when she was given the opportunity to perform at Carnegie. But the process that opened those doors was not so easy.

Baker’s bachelor’s degree from Yale University in American Studies gave her a special interest in the influence of American Composers on American music. While attending the Sixth Annual Festival of Women’s Composers at Indiana University of Pennsylvania in March 2001, Baker performed a piece of music called “Mary Cassatt.” Following the performance, the festival’s Composer in Residence, Libby Larson, approached Baker.

“I knew I had sung four wrong notes within the twenty-two minute performance,” Baker said. “But (Larson) was extremely complimentary.”

Larson recommended Baker to Michael Tilson Thomas, Director of the San Francisco Symphony and founder of the New World Symphony.

Baker said she contacted Thomas, but did not hear from him for a long time. Then after several months, Thomas contacted her and requested she send another recording of her voice. Soon after, Baker was flying to Santa Fe for a live audition. Her performance landed her a spot in Thomas’s upcoming presentation of the music of Aaron Copeland to be performed in the newly opened Zankel Recital Hall in Carnegie.

“All along I was working on a recording of art-song literature by American women composers,” Baker said. “I thought it was really appropriate that I would end up with a gig by an American Composer.”

Landing the performance was followed by months of concentrated rehearsals, some of which Baker had to travel to Miami to attend.

“The rehearsals were very intense,” Baker said. “The choir was excellent. They were really an amateur choir, although I’m not sure I would have known that. They were used to one person conducting, and they had to get used to someone else. I had to get used to them, and we all had to get used to each other.”

On November 19, 2003, Sonya Baker concluded the Thomas’s concert with a song titled “In the Beginning.”

“It was a very long concert because (Thomas) spoke between numbers,” Baker said. “He was doing a retrospective on Aaron Copeland through the concert, and my song was the last piece. So, I had to stay warmed up.”

After her debut, Baker returned to Murray State to finish her CD, which she hoped to release at a campus recital on October 24, 2004. The experiences Baker had through Carnegie and the release of her debut album have served to inspire both her and her students.

HEALTHY HOUSE

MSU ENJOYS NEW WELLNESS CENTER

Health and wellness took the forefront in campus development as the 2004 – 2005 school year saw the opening of the new Murray State Student Wellness and Recreation Center. The center accommodated students as well as faculty and alumni.

Murray State had always been on the leading edge of student health and wellness. In the early years at Murray State, Wilson Hall housed a gymnasium and several classes were held there for physical health education.

Carr Health was developed in the '30s for the growing needs of the students and the needs of the physical education programs.

As the campus grew over the next 60 years, so did the needs to expand the facilities available to students for exercise and recreation.

In 1998, plans were designed for a new student wellness facility to go up behind Stewart Stadium.

"This design was intended to be much closer to student housing, so they will have a greater opportunity to use it," Jim Bauer, Director of Student Life, said.

The facilities included an Olympic-size swimming pool, a vortex pool, raquetball/wallyball courts, walking track, free weights, machine weights, steppers, treadmills and multi purpose rooms where exercise classes were held.

"The Murray State Student Recreation and Wellness Center is a wonderful asset to the college," Alison Eperson, Wellness Center Facilities Coordinator, said. "It offers students, faculty, and alumni many activities to participate in, a beautiful building to do them in."

There was also a lounge area, computer lab and a fully functioning student eatery called the Healthy Horse Café.

"The Wellness Center offers a great way to spend your free time and not have to go very far," Nikki Crosser, senior from New Castle, said. "You can workout, take fitness classes, swim, play basketball, eat a snack, watch television and surf the net all in one place."

On any given night, Murray State President F. King Alexander could be seen playing basketball with students on any of the three courts at the facilities or just watching campus recreational activities.

OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH

Attending college is not just about classes and late nights spent studying for exams. College is a prime time for many students to step outside their classes and learn leadership skills as well as better prepare themselves for future careers.

Students of the College of Health's Occupational Health and Safety program did just that in 2004 through participation in student groups.

Two such student groups, the American Industrial Hygiene Association and the American Society of Safety Engineers, distinguished themselves nationally and locally through research projects and participation both on and off Murray State's campus.

In 2004, the ASSE was awarded by the Mine Safety Appliances Company as an "Outstanding Student Section" in recognition of significant achievement in the field of safety education and research and Public Awareness.

The AIHA was awarded as the "Student Local Section of the Year" for the third year in a row in recognition of outstanding programs, activities and contributions toward industrial hygiene excellence for the 2003-2004 academic year.

David Kraemer, Dean of the Department of Industrial and Engineering Technology, said no other program in the country has won both awards for the student groups.

"Both are outstanding student groups," Kraemer said.

David Fender, assistant professor for the Department, also served as the advisor to Murray State's ASSE student section.

"The group participates in a combination of meetings and conducts activities and research on and off campus," Fender said. "We are required to do significant research. This year we were involved in two projects."

Fender said the student group interviewed students who had interned at various jobs over the summer about their experiences as interns. The results of the survey were published in Professional Safety, a monthly magazine. He also said the group researched a VX nerve agent and published their findings in the magazine as well.

In addition to research projects, Fender said the group participated in community service projects such as helping the Calloway County Emergency Management Coordinator in fitting emergency clothing, conducting organomic reviews to help businesses design comfortable work spaces for employees and assisting the Angels Clinic with evacuation plans.

Ashley Robbins, junior from Hardinsburg, was the president for ASSE and helped lead her chapter in conducting the research and activities to earn them the award.

"Getting this award is a really good deal," Robbins said. "It gives the department and the university great publicity within our area. We get lots of inquiries from companies. This helps put MSU on the map in this narrow field."

Melissa Burcham, junior from Owensboro, said being a part of ASSE opened up doors for meeting new people and improving leadership.

"It's given us opportunities to network with peers and safety professionals," Burcham said.

Fender said in 2004 the rules regarding the awards for ASSE and AIHA were changed and both groups will be eligible for the award every year instead of every two years.

Said Burcham: "It takes a lot of work to earn these awards, but you learn to delegate and use skills that different people have."

FALL ON THE FARM

SCHOOL OF AG PRESENTS AGRICULTURE-AGROTOURISM

Fall was the favorite time of year for many, when the leaves began to change colors and a chill in the air gave everyone a reason to wear brightly colored sweaters and the occasional knitted scarf with matching gloves. But in the School of Agriculture, fall presented the perfect opportunity to get involved with a growing branch of agriculture-agritourism.

According to the Land of 10,000 Trails, an initiative of West Kentucky Corporation, agritourism was the act of visiting a working farm for any agricultural, horticultural or agri-business operation for the purpose of enjoyment, education or active involvement in the activities of the farm or operation. Farms across Western Kentucky were beginning to offer more agritourism-related opportunities.

Olivia Grace, graduate student from Hopkinsville and External Grants and Activity Specialist for the School of Agriculture, was one of the students involved with planning the School of Agriculture's own agritourism event, which took place the weekend of October 22, 2004 at Pullen Farm Complex. Grace said the Agriculture Leadership Council, a group of representative students selected by different agriculture clubs, sponsored the weekend, which was called "Fall on the Farm."

Grace said elementary students from several different schools came to participate in activities that included a corn maze, pedal tractor races, soybean/corn play pit, petting zoo and straw maze. Each event was sponsored by a different club within the School of Agriculture.

"The students who put this event on and made it a success," Grace said. "The community also played a major role."

Grace said the event was both new and exciting for all involved.

"I actually received thank you notes from the students at one of the elementary schools telling me how much they enjoyed it," Grace said.

Joel Perkins, sophomore from Cheatham, Ill., said he enjoyed the interaction with the kids and saw Fall on the Farm as a way to benefit the community of Murray.

Said Perkins: "It was a good way of giving back to the community because the community gives so much to us."

RECRUITMENT AND RETENTION

DEPARTMENT WORKS TO ATTRACT STUDENTS

To most people, the phrase “R-and-R” stood for “rest and relaxation.” It was most often accompanied by images of people sipping on lemonade as they rested on sunny beaches where the waves rolled gently across the sand.

But for the School of Agriculture at Murray State, “R and R” stood for “recruitment and retention,” a process through which the college grew exponentially over the past decade.

Tony Brannon, dean of the School of Agriculture, said enrollment in the school decreased dramatically in the 1980s. Jim Davis, who served as the dean of the Department of Agriculture at that time, emphasized the importance of recruitment and began to implement programs to bring more students into the department.

Brannon said that Davis’ tactics worked, and the department had a 10 percent increase in enrollment each year since those programs began.

Christy Watkins, recruitment coordinator for the School of Agriculture, had served in her position since Davis first began emphasizing recruitment. Watkins said the School of Agriculture sought to recruit students through a variety of programs.

Watkins said events hosted by the Future Farmers of America gave the school a chance to reach out to potential students.

“These events give the school of Agriculture the opportunity to get high schools to Murray State’s campus,” Watkins said. “While they are here the faculty, staff and students assist the high school students with their leadership skills as well as promote the university and the School of Agriculture.”

Watkins said the more comfortable students felt on campus, the more likely they were to consider attending Murray State after high school.

Watkins said the School of Agriculture also used an Agriculture Ambassadors program to recruit students. This group of agriculture students within the school assisted with recruitment activities throughout the year. They spoke to agriculture classes about the importance of college, careers, programs, clubs/organizations, scholarships and farm complexes.

Justin Sims, senior from Dix, Ill., served the School of Agriculture as an ambassador. He said the ambassador program made the School of Agriculture familiar to high school students around the area. He said this familiarity attracted students to the campus.

“I think part of it has to do with the fact that so much of this stuff is hands-on,” Simms said. “You work closely with many of the same people and I think that helps add to the fact that you are more comfortable in that area.”

Once students are enrolled in the school, they are encouraged to become involved on campus and in the community, Watkins said.

“We try to get them involved in agriculture on a local, state and national scale,” Watkins said. “When you combine the many activities available within the School of Agriculture with an outstanding faculty and staff, the students feel like they are at their second home when at Murray State.

“Recruitment in the School of Agriculture is embraced by all of the faculty and staff,” Watkins said. “Everyone does their part when we host recruitment events or have a student visit campus.”

“We have a commitment to student clubs and activities,” Brannon said. “Our professors are very student oriented and regularly meet, eat and greet with past, present, and future students.

“Students feel at home in our program and once we get them here, we feel that we communicate to them that they are important and we expect them to finish their degree,” Brannon said. “Yes, we have outstanding farms, outstanding animals, outstanding crops, outstanding facilities, but the greatest asset of our school is our faculty and our students.”

TSM

TSM SETTING NEW STANDARDS FOR THE TELECOMMUNICATIONS FIELD

The obstacles can be overwhelming when someone sets out to achieve something that has never been accomplished before. Facing such obstacles often requires careful thought and planning. But when the desired goal is accomplished, the results can be outstanding. This was what a committee of members at Murray State discovered when they established the Telecommunications Systems Management program at the University in 1999. Five years later, in 2004, it was growing as the only program of its kind in the nation.

In the late 1990's the Kentucky State Legislature appropriated funds for each public university in the state to develop a program of distinction, Jim McCoy, professor of economy and finance for the College of Business and Public Affairs, said. He said the university decided to build a program in telecommunications that would be dually operated under the College of Business and Public Affairs and the College of Science, Engineering and Technology.

"It just made sense to draw not just one program's strengths, but on the strengths of several colleges on the campus," McCoy said.

Dannie Harrison, dean of the College of Business and Public Affairs, said there were several reasons why the university wanted to combine the strengths of the two colleges.

"We were looking to give students a strong technical background in the telecommunications industry and concurrent with that give them a strong business background," Harrison said. "For example, a graduate (of TSM) would know how to put together a network for a business but also be able to figure out how much that network would cost."

TSM was administered by a team of educators from both colleges that included a TSM center director and the Academic Provost, Gary Brockway. Students of the program enrolled in both business and technology classes and received hands-on work experience designed to prepare them for a career in telecommunications after graduation.

Neil Weber, dean of the College of Science, Engineering and Technology said the program has benefited its students in many ways.

"(It) has brought tremendous visibility as far as new economy initiatives," Weber said. "The telecommunications industry interfaces with so many new economy initiatives and creates tremendous opportunities for graduates."

"We have an area of programming in many fields that is very dependent on the skills we are producing," he continued. "Three big trends in today's world are finance, government and networking. Network security and wireless communication are technical kinds of skills that (our) undergraduates can attain."

Danny Claiborne, chair of the Department of Technology for the College of Business and Public Affairs, said the program is a constant race against technology because the field of telecommunications is growing and new technology is created everyday.

"I just read a report from the United States Department of Labor that said (telecommunications) is the fastest growing field," Claiborne said. "We have tried to make sure that we maintain current state-of-the-art technology."

Wesley Spencer, senior from Nashville, said the TSM program has opened up a lot of career avenues he would not have explored otherwise.

"The program has given me management and technical skills so I haven't been locked into one career path," Spencer said. "I felt that most of my classes were extremely challenging. They really caused me to learn material I would not have learned otherwise. Right now I have employed at a job that would be impossible for me if it weren't for the lab classes I've taken."

In the fall of 2004, the program was at its peak enrollment with 207 undergraduate students. Harrison said he thinks the program is on the cutting edge of both business and technology.

"When we developed (TSM) we were really kind of shooting in the dark," Harrison said. "The program has really come a long way."

TSM was an example for other universities across the nation. It demonstrated how teamwork on the part of faculty and staff across different academic colleges could create a successful program for students.

"It's not an accident," McCoy said. "This program works because we all work together to provide the best programming for our students."

CENTER FOR RESERVOIR RESEARCH

With proximity to Kentucky Lake and motivated faculty, the Murray State College of Science, Engineering and Technology was able to continue its excellence in ecosystem research using the Center for Reservoir Research (CRR).

The Kentucky Council on Higher Education established CRR in 1987 as a "Center of Excellence" for teaching and promoting research.

The CRR was the umbrella center for three other research facilities at Murray State: the Chemical Services Laboratory, the Mid-America Remote Sensing Center, and the Hancock Biological Station. These organizations worked together under Dr. David S. White, coordinator of CCR.

The Chemical Services Laboratory, equipped with state-of-the-art instrumentation, provided otherwise unavailable chemical analysis and analytical and environmental services to individuals, corporations, and other institutions in the west Kentucky area. The Mid-America Remote Sensing Center served as the database for the research done by the other two branches of the CRR.

Finally, the Hancock Biological Station, which was located 15 miles off Murray State's campus at Kentucky Lake served as the main facility for field research, examining the nutrient, ion and organic content of water. It also contained the main CRR office with facilities for the teaching/research component of CRR activity and for use by visiting scientists.

"I like the system we have set up here at Murray State because it coordinates research efforts and channels it into useful knowledge," White said. "I really love my job."

Students and faculty had a close relationship when it came to research and development within the CRR. Particularly at HBS, the students and faculty were involved in what was called the long-term monitoring program. This program monitored 12 primary sites and a number of embayments around Kentucky Lake.

"Our long-term monitoring program really gets the students involved in the research process," White said. "We put a lot of work into our program and it's hard to describe the feeling of 'wealth' you receive in return."

Although the Greek system started on Murray State University's campus in 1942 with the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, the 1960's is when the core of sororities and fraternities were granted their charters.

In 1961, Delta Omega, a local sorority, petitioned Alpha Omicron Pi to be granted a charter after looking at several other possible sororities. AOPi sorority was founded at the Barnard College in 1897. In 2004, AOPi raised money for their national philanthropy, Arthritis Foundation, for which all chapters had raised over $1 million in total.

"The Arthritis Foundation holds a special place in the heart of each AOPi," Amanda Carter, senior from Murray, said. "We enjoyed raising money to help this disease, which effects some of the sisters in our chapter today."

AOPis held events that were similar to the ones the chapter had in the 1960's such as the Red Rose Ball, Parent's Bunch and Senior Sendoff. The chapter added Mr. MSU in 1981.

After AOPi received their charter, Alpha Gamma Delta and Alpha Delta Pi sororities were next in line to receive their charters in 1966 and 1968. The fraternity system was started by Pi Kappa Alpha in March of 1958, which was the first fraternity not only on MSU's campus, but the first social fraternity on any state college in Kentucky. The Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity was the first one to receive their charter during the 1960's.

Alpha Gamma Rho started as a colony on November 25, 1959 on MSU's campus. The national fraternity was founded in 1908 at Ohio State University. After eight years, the fraternity received their charter in 1968 and moved to their current location in 1969. They were the first professional and social fraternity on campus, the first to have a house off campus and the first to have a house mom.

"The chapter is strong with a tight brotherhood," Zach Hobbs, graduate student from Owensboro, said. "We have six acres of land which really offers something to perspective students."

Other fraternities that received charters were Lambda Chi Alpha and Sigma Pi in 1968 and Alpha Phi Alpha, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Kappa Alpha, and Sigma Nu were in 1969.

During the 1960s, governing bodies for fraternities and sororities were formed. Inter Fraternity Council and Panhellenic Council set up rules dealing with rush, party policies and other regulations to try to keep the Greek system successful.

In 1969, Alpha Phi Alpha was the first African-American Fraternity on the MSU campus.

Some of the fraternities and sororities started in the 60's no longer exist on campus. During the 2004-2005 school year, there were 14 fraternities and seven sororities on campus.

"The Greek system was in good shape," Jim Baurer, Greek advisor, said. "It provided most of the student leaders here on campus."

Alpha Delta Pi was the first Greek organization for women founded in 1851 at Wesleyan Women's College in Macon, Ga. ADPi was established at Murray State in 1968.

The ladies of ADPi began the year by hosting their annual Jell-O Slurp-Off. All profits from the event benefited their philanthropy, the Ronald McDonald House. The sisters took a trip to visit the Ronald McDonald House in Nashville with sisters from other chapters.

One of the highlights of the year for ADPi came when Jessica Crockett, senior from Somerset, was named Homecoming Queen 2004.

ADPi also participated in intramural sports and supported other Greek philanthropies. Sisters spent time volunteering for the humane society, walking in the Relay for Life and leading a Girl Scout troop. In addition, they participated in the American Heart Association Heart Walk and United Way Fun Run and hosted an Easter egg hunt for local children.

Several sisters were on the Dean's List and were inducted into the Greek honor societies Order of Omega and Gamma Sigma Alpha. Members were also involved in the Racer Band, Murray State equestrian team, Murray State News and Residential College Council.

ALPHA GAMMA DELTA

Alpha Gamma Delta sorority was founded in 1904 at Syracuse University. By 2004, it had become an international sorority with 112 active chapters across North America and as a proud member of the National Panhellenic Conference, Alpha Gamma Delta celebrated its centennial.

The Gamma Xi chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta was founded at Murray State in 1966 and has since pursued the purpose of Alpha Gamma Delta through the development of leadership skills and academic excellence while setting high ideals for its members and celebrating the unbreakable bonds of sisterhood.

The members of Gamma Xi spent the year hosting and attending special events in celebration of one hundred years of sisterhood, which included attending the 42nd International Convention in Chicago. At the convention, the chapter received various awards including the International Council Merit Award given to the chapter achieving the highest Target Achievement score for Alpha Gamma Delta chapters. Other honors included Chapter Efficiency, Philanthropy, Scholarship Improvement, Member Development, Recruitment and Activities.

Each year, the sisters of Gamma Xi hosted Rock-a-thon and B-Ball Slam to raise money for their philanthropy, the Alpha Gamma Delta Foundation. Money raised for the foundation is used to support juvenile diabetes.

Members were involved in campus activities from Student Government Association to the Racer Girls dance team, proving that members of Alpha Gamma Delta come in all shapes and sizes with a variety of interests.

Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. was founded by 16 young women on January 15, 1908 at Howard University in Washington, D.C. The colors of the organizations were salmon pink and apple green. The national flower was the pink tea rose. The Zeta Zeta chapter at Murray State University was chartered January 9, 1971. The sorority continuously held programs to implement the purpose of our sorority. Through that, many programs that took place were the Coat Drive to Needline, Talent Shows and Men's Appreciation Program.

Alpha Omicron Pi sorority was founded January 2, 1887 at Barnard College in New York.

The Delta Omega chapter of AOPi was founded at Murray State in 1961 and has continued to hold true to its ideals. Founder Stella George Stern Perry once wrote, "that which makes our bond is promise certain of success. Let us follow our ensign devotedly, utterly and bravely. For our purpose cannot fail!"

The Delta Omega chapter of AOPi took great pride in representing Murray State University. The sisters of AOPi were involved in a variety of campus activities including Student Government Association and various departmental organizations. Many served as Student Ambassadors and Summer Orientation Leaders. They were also members of many different honor societies and worked to maintain their achievement of the Highest Sorority Grade Point Average on campus. They enjoyed playing intramural sports, cheering on the Racers, and participating in All Campus Sing.

AOPi hosted Mr.MSU, its annual philanthropic event, which became a prominent campus tradition. They celebrated the 25th anniversary of Mr. MSU in the fall of 2005. This event, as well as Delta Omega's Strike Out Arthritis homerun derby, benefited AOPi's philanthropy, Arthritis Research.

Alpha Sigma Alpha was founded in 1901 at Longwood College in Farmville, VA. Murray State University welcomed ASA, the Beta Nu chapter, on campus in 1946.

ASA was involved in several philanthropic endeavors throughout the year. The ladies supported their national philanthropies of the S. June Smith Center and the Special Olympics. Locally, they raised money for and were involved in Relay for Life, Up 'Til Dawn, American Heart Association Heart Walk, Needline, among many others.

The second annual ASA Dodgeball tournament raised over $1,600 for Toys for Tots, which provided local children a much needed Christmas. The women were able to give 60 children gifts and provided a homecooked dinner to their families.

Members of ASA were expected to be well-rounded women and uphold the values of the organization and superiority of Murray States Greek system. Among several national awards, Beta Nu was named a Four Star chapter for the fourth year in a row.

Sigma Sigma Sigma was founded nationally in 1898 at Longwood College in Farmville, Va. Sigma Sigma Sigma established the Alpha Chi chapter and was the first sorority at MSU in 1942.

The Sigma Sigma Sigma national philanthropy is the Robbie Page Memorial. It was established in 1951 after the death of the son of the sorority's National President, May Hasting Holloway Page. Locally, the ladies sponsored Volleybash, Play-A-Thon, Kidnap for Robbie and Run for Robbie to raise money for various research projects sponsored by the Robbie Page Memorial Fund.

The Sigma Sigma Sigma's national symbol, the sailboat, was adopted after Robbie Page's death. The sailboat signifies "ever forward motion" and was Robbie Page's favorite toy.

SORORITY LIFE

Alpha Gamma Rho was a social-professional fraternity, which was founded in 1904 at Ohio State University. Alpha Gamma Rho at Murray State was initiated as Alpha Omega chapter on May 18, 1968.

The fraternity's ideals are embodied in a single word "Fraternalism." Man's advancements, slow as they have been, have come about largely as the result of his realization of the brotherhood of man. Their fraternity is not a club, but rather a group of dedicated individuals, striving together to bind themselves with ties of sincere and enduring brotherhood.

AGR was the only professional and social fraternity in the Inter-fraternity Council. Each year, AGR held Paul Bunyan Day to raise money for St. Jude's Children's Hospital.

Alpha Phi Alpha was founded on April 10, 1967 by Richard N. Evans, Jr. The name of the organization at that time was Kappa Phi.

The purpose of the fraternity was to provide brotherhood to worthy men who displayed the qualities of high intellectual ability, high moral standards and religious ideals. The organization became a member of the Inter-Fraternity Council on October 14, 1967. On January 11, 1969, Kappa Phi officially became Theta Omega chapter.

Alpha Phi Alpha is the oldest and largest predominantly Afro-American fraternity in the world. Each year, Alpha Phi Alpha held the Miss Black and Gold Scholarship Pageant and the Alpha Step Off, which raised money for March of Dimes, NAACP, Boy Scouts of America and Big Brother & Big Sisters of America.

Alpha Sigma Phi was founded at Yale University on December 6, 1845 as a sophomore society for Yale students. The fraternity stood for the fostering of education, maintaining charity, promoting patriotism, encouraging culture and high scholarship, assisting in the building of character, promote college loyalties and to perpetuate friendships and cement social ties within its membership. Alpha Sigma Phi's brotherhood was the development of lifelong human relationships based on respect, mutual love and support.

Delta Tau was founded on October 8, 1994 at Murray State. Each year, Delta Tau held Banana Fest and Spring Fling to raise money for Canine Companions for Independence. Alpha Sigma Phi's motto was "To better the man." Also, Delta Tau was awarded The Grand Senior Presidents award for top chapter in the nation, highest active fraternity GPA on campus, first annual Greek Wall of Fame Award and Alpha Gamma Upsilon Award.

The Creed of Alpha Tau Omega

To bind men together in a brotherhood based upon eternal and immutable principles, with a bond as strong as right itself and as lasting as humanity, to know no North, no South, no East, no West but to know man as man, to teach that true men the world over should stand together and contend for supremacy of good over evil; to teach, not politics, but morals; to foster, not partisanship, but the recognition of true merit wherever found; to have no narrower limits within which to work together for the elevation of man than the outlines of the world. These were the thoughts and hopes uppermost in the minds of the founders of the Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity.

Kappa Alpha Psi , a college Fraternity, now comprised of functioning Undergraduate and Alumni Chapters on major campuses and in cities throughout the country, was the crystallization of a dream. It is the beautiful realization of a vision shared commonly by the late Revered Founders Elder Watson Diggs, "The Dreamer"; John Milton Lee ; Byron K. Armstrong; Guy Levis Grant; Ezra D. Alexander; Henry T. Asher; Marcus P. Blakemore; Paul W. Caine; Edward G. Irvin and George W. Edmonds.

It was the vision of these astute men that enabled them in the school year 1910 - 11, more specifically the night of January 5, 1911, on the campus of Indiana University at Bloomington, Indiana, to sow the seed of a fraternal tree whose fruit was available to, and enjoyed by, college men everywhere, regardless of their color, religion or national origin. It was a fact of which KAPPA ALPHA PSI was justly proud that the Constitution has never contained any clause which either excluded or suggested the exclusion of a man from membership merely because of his color, creed, or national origin. The Constitution of KAPPA ALPHA PSI is predicated upon, and dedicated to, the principles of achievement through a truly democratic Fraternity.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Lambda Chi Alpha was founded by Warren A. Cole, while he was a student at Boston University, on November 9, 1909; with the expressed objective purpose of bringing about the association together of college students of good moral character in the various collegiate institutions within the United States and Canada; to foster a high Christian standard of life and ideals, to promote honorable friendship, to cultivate intellectual excellence, to secure for members the greatest advantages in college life and establish brotherly love, mutual aid, close personal connection between alumni, undergraduates and college.

Lambda Chi Alpha International Fraternity was one of the largest men's general fraternities in North America with more than 227,000 initiated members and has held subsidiaries (called chapters) at more than 300 universities. It was the first fraternity to eliminate pledging and remains a leader in the fight against hazing, alcohol abuse and other challenges facing today's college student. Lambda Chi Alpha served to complement higher education by providing opportunities for academic achievement, leadership development and lifelong friendships.

The Lambda Eta chapter was founded at Murray State in 1968. Each year, Lambda Chi hosted a food drive for North American Food Drive (Need Line) and Watermelon Bust. The motto for Lambda Chi was "Every man a man."

Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc. was founded at Howard University in Washington, D.C., January 9, 1914, by three young African-American male students. The founders, Honorable A. Langston Taylor, Honorable Leonard F. Morse, and Honorable Charles I. Brown, wanted to organize a Greek letter fraternity that would truly exemplify the ideals of brotherhood, scholarship, and service.

The founders deeply wished to create an organization that viewed itself as “a part of” the general community rather than “apart from” the general community. They believed that each potential member should be judged by his own merits rather than his family background or affluence...without regard of race, nationality, skin tone or texture of hair. They wished and wanted their fraternity to exist as part of even a greater brotherhood which would be devoted to the “inclusive we” rather than the “exclusive we”.

From its inception, the Founders also conceived Phi Beta Sigma as a mechanism to deliver services to the general community. Rather than gaining skills to be utilized exclusively for themselves and their immediate families, the founders of Phi Beta Sigma held a deep conviction that they should return their newly acquired skills to the communities from which they had come. This deep conviction was mirrored in the Fraternity’s motto, “Culture For Service and Service For Humanity.”

PHI KAPPA TAU

Phi Kappa Tau was founded on March 17, 1906 at Miami University Oxford, Ohio. The Delta Pi Colony was started at Murray State on April 17, 1982 and received their official charter on April 30, 2005. Phi Kappa Tau was founded on the ideas of enhancing the experience of college life, provide positive examples for fellow students, support goals of the University, be active in campus and community life, self improvement and support for all members of the organization.

Phi Kappa Tau's philanthropy was Hole in the Wall Gang Camps which was a group of eight camps for critically ill children in the United States, Ireland and France. Delta Pi raised money through a rebate day at Gatti's, a yard sale and participated in "Relay for Life."

Phi Kappa Tau's colors were Harvard Red and old gold and their motto was "Where character counts."

The seven men who founded Sigma Chi Fraternity in 1855 at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, ranged in age from 15 to 25 years. They established an organization on the foundations of friendship, justice, and learning, hoping that it might serve as an inspiration for collegiates all across the country to strive to better not only their own lives, but also those of their brothers.

The Alumni is one of the strongest aspects of the fraternity. The four years of membership while in the university pass ever too fast, but the increasing number of Sigma Chi Alumni Chapters throughout the world makes membership life long; and likewise the love for fellowship and brotherhood carries forth in the post graduation years. Greek life is a splendid experience, but the men of Sigma Chi pride themselves in the fact that the firm bond of friendship and devotion is far more than a splendid experience-it is a memory to cherish forever.

The brothers of Sigma Chi hold many philanthropy events each year. In the fall, their Haunted House raises money for the American Cancer Society. Also, the fraternity made a trip to St. Jude's Hospital in Memphis to tour the facilities. Each spring, Sigma Chi holds their philanthropy event called Derby Days. The money raised is given to their national philanthropy Children's Miracle Network. Nationally, Sigma Chi has raised over $5 million dollars for CMN.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

Sigma Phi Epsilon had another successful semester.

Members have focused on community service over the past several years, and this semester was no different. At the beginning of the semester, Sigma Phi Epsilon supported and served Habitat for Humanity in their 2004 Blitz Build with Woodsmen of the World. They also helped support their philanthropy, YouthAids, by holding a successful car smash.

Directly before finals week, they combined their efforts with Sigma Sigma Sigma to give the children of Head Start a merry Christmas. SigEp raised over $600 to buy presents for the children and presented them to the children with Tri Sigma. They also were able to raise over $1,800 for a MSU family that was stricken with cancer right before Christmas.

Nationally, SigEp was founded at the University of Richmond on November 1, 1901. SigEp was founded on the words... "This fraternity will be different," spoken by one of our founding fathers, Carter Ashton Jenkins, and on the cardinal principles, "Virtue, Diligence, and Brotherly Love." Our fraternity colors are red, purple, and gold.

Locally, SigEp Kentucky Epsilon was chartered on May 17, 1969. Our chapter mascot was Marley T. Beagle. The 2004-2005 chapter sweetheart was Megan Alvey.

On January 26, 1897, Miss Charlotte N. Malotte, the professor of Latin and French, spoke to a student group at the chapel hour. She spoke on the subject of "College Fraternities" which sparked the interest of several students. Then, on the afternoon of February 26, a new fraternity had its first meeting. When, after a long session, the meeting adjourned, a literary society had been born, though it was yet unnamed.

The founders of the Fraternity, all cadets at Vincennes University, were William Raper Kennedy, James Thompson Kingsbury, George Martin Patterson, and Rolin Rosco James. The first three were seniors; James was a freshman.

According to history, the mother of the first two initiates, Mrs. Bayard, took a deep interest in the organization and used her influence to steer Tau Phi Delta in the right direction. On one occasion she entered the library of her home to find a meeting of the Fraternity in progress. The business of the hour was the adoption of an appropriate motto. No satisfactory agreement on the subject had been reached. Taking a volume of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's poems from a shelf, she turned to A Death In The Desert, and read:

Progress, man's distinctive mark alone,
Not God's, and not the beasts';
God is, they are.
Man partly is and wholly hopes to be.

February 11, 1907, is a significant date in the Fraternity's history. It was then the members last assembled as Tau Phi Delta and first assumed the name of Sigma Pi Fraternity of the United States.

In 1984, the Fraternity again changed its name. At the 37th Biennial Convocation, Sigma Pi became an international fraternity by accepting its first Canadian chapter.

OMEGA PSI PHI

On Friday evening, November 17, 1911, three Howard University undergraduate students, with the assistance of their faculty adviser, gave birth to the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. This event occurred in the office of biology Professor Ernest E. Just, the faculty adviser, in the Science Hall (now known as Thirkield Hall). The three liberal arts students were Edgar A. Love, Oscar J. Cooper and Frank Coleman. From the initials of the Greek phrase meaning “friendship is essential to the soul,” the name Omega Psi Phi was derived. The phrase was selected as the motto. Manhood, scholarship, perseverance and uplift were adopted as cardinal principles. A decision was made regarding the design for the pin and emblem, and thus ended the first meeting of the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity .

The Honorable Founders of Iota Phi Theta started an organization that was INNOVATIVE and fought for Positive Change in Cultural, Economic, Educational, and Political arenas. Where others dared not go, what others dared not do, Iota went and did. For all of this the founders of Iota Phi Theta, and future members became known as The “Sons of the Revolution!”

Iota Phi Theta promotes and perpetuates Brotherhood, Citizenship, Fidelity, Leadership, and Scholarship. Iota is comprised of men from many economic, ethnic, religious, and social backgrounds.

Iota Phi Theta is the choice for the collegiate and professional man who believed in Brotherhood, contributing to the betterment of Humankind, and desires high academic & personal achievement! Iota Phi Theta was an organization for leaders; leaders who wish to keep their personal identity, while working with others to accomplish great things! The men of Iota Phi Theta continued to uphold our Founders’ Vision & Motto: “Building a Tradition, Not Resting UPON ONE!”

In May of 1958, the fraternity system became a reality at Murray State.

Under the direction of Dean William G. Nash, the Tau Sigma Tau local fraternity received a charter as the Epsilon Lambda chapter of the Pi Kappa Alpha National Fraternity- the first chapter of any national social fraternity to be installed on the campus of any state college in Kentucky.

During the summer of 2004, Pi Kappa Alpha suffered a loss when their lodge was destroyed in a fire. No one was injured and the members were planning to rebuild.

The Pikes held the Pig Out as its yearly philanthropic event and the money raised was donated towards juvenile diabetes. Sororities competed at different fun events and later in the evening there was a party. Their mascot was a Dalmatian and had an old fire truck sitting in front of their lodge. Pi Kappa Alpha was founded nationally on March 1, 1868 at the University of Virginia.

Keeping with the unique atmosphere of the 1970s, Murray State University offered a variety of organizations to satisfy everyone's interests at that time. While in 2005, MSU offered a wide assortment organizations; students of the '70s seemed to have more diverse opportunities available to them.

The organizations of Murray State in 2005 tended to be honor societies, academic, and religious groups, among others. However, in the '70s, military and minority groups were prevalent.

Among the military organizations were Scabbard and Blade, a military honor society, the Pershing Rifles, an honorary society for military science cadets, and the Ranger Company, a counterguerilla military group. The ROTC Wives and Fiancées Club was available for women in this category.

Minority groups had a large representation on campus. While the Student Government Association was already in place, there was also a Women's Student Government Association in the '70s. The Black Student Union and Black Advisory Council offered multicultural involvement similar to that of the Black Student Council today.

In addition to the more typical organizations of the time, the '70s offered some unique opportunities. One of these was a club called the Lake Barkley Social Club. It consisted of 17 off-campus students who did not travel to Murray for their classes. Their professors came to teach them in Eddyville at the Kentucky State Penitentiary. The inmates were part of a program started in 1975 to allow prisoners to earn a two-year associate degree in general studies from MSU.

While many organizations in the '70s offered an academic focus, not all clubs were for this purpose. One of these was Alfa Alfa Fescue. According to the 1979 Shield, "Alfa Alfa Fescue was founded on genuine insanity for the brotherhood of all involved. They do anything for the sake of humor and friendship. Everything must be put above this organization."

Advised by Dr. George Britt, the Alfa Alfa Fescue enjoyed activities such as hayrides, picnics and outings. According to the 1979 Shield, "They are the original good humor men. Their insanity is surpassed only by their apathy."

Other clubs of interest were the Sea Mists, a women's swimming organization, the Iron Horse Weightlifting Club, and STEAM, Students for Total Equality at Murray. The Fillies was a dance team similar to the Racer Girls of today, and the Dames Club provided more involvement opportunities for women. The Lakeland Interpreters and the Outing Club planned activities in the community and surrounding areas.

These organizations, along with many others, created a diverse atmosphere at Murray State during the 1970s. While we continue to have many opportunities for student involvement in 2005, particularly in honor societies and religious groups, the '70s offered a place for students in more military and minority organizations.

Many students with political vision and personal ambition found their voices at Murray State with a newly formed student political organization, the Students for Social Justice.

SSJ was started in fall 2004 with the immediate purpose of decreasing student political apathy, but as the 2004 presidential election vividly divided the nation between supporters for George W. Bush and John Kerry, their goal shifted to political conversions for their liberal views. SSJ spent much of the fall semester raising issue awareness and registering new voters for the 2004 election.

Through its first semester, SSJ grew to 35 active members with numerous other supporters. Weekly meetings were held to organize their political agenda. Dr. Chris Bierwirth, professor of history, advised SSJ. Bierwirth helped arrange events like public showings of the anti-Bush documentaries, anti-Bush rally's on campus and voter registration booths at which they registered more than 60 new voters.

Although the group was undoubtedly democratic/liberal in nature, that was not necessarily intended at its conception.

"We weren't trying to exclude anyone," Bierwirth said. "It just worked out that way."

These emerging liberal views spurred on what Bierwirth called a "healthy rivalry" with the politically conservative organization on campus, the College Republicans.

"I thought what both groups did was great," Bierwirth said. "We would show an anti-Bush movie and they would show up with flyers for their pro-Bush movie. I really love that type of dialogue."

After the election results, which strongly favored the Republican camp, SSJ knew they had to switch gears.

"Needless to say, we were upset about the election results, but we tried to stay positive and productive," Bierwirth said.

Bierwirth announced his intention to resign as the SSJ advisor early in February of 2005 for what he called "internal turmoil." He claimed that a small group of students drove many of the other active members away by focusing more on internal power than on external political issues.

Said Bierwirth: "We had a great start in the fall and even though we had a long way to go before becoming a viable organization, this insurgence from just a few of the members unraveled everything we had worked towards."

College Democrats

Political activism was never a stranger to Murray State with organizations like the College Democrats leading the way in election years, just like they did in fall 2004.

The College Democrats played a role in every major election since the mid 1980's and this experience through the years enabled the members to learn from the past and apply it to the 2004 presidential election between Republican President George W. Bush and Democratic nominee John Kerry.

The College Democrats consistently held weekly meetings with 20 to 25 active members. With personal political affiliations shifting often, the nature of membership had high turnover each semester. During a non-election year, these meetings usually were primarily social in nature.

Their focus during the election was to get information out to the student body about the Democratic candidates running for office. Recognizing they could reach more people in the community as well as the student body by increasing size, the College Democrats made an important merger. They linked up with the Calloway Country Democratic Party, which was headquartered in the old Nissan dealership on Chestnut Street in Murray.

This union helped both groups raise awareness for both the national candidates like John Kerry, and their local democratic candidates like Buddy Buckingham, who ran for State Representative, and Dennis Noll, who ran for State Senate.

One way they tried to sway public opinion was through tee shirts and bumper stickers. In the weeks leading up to the elections, a few students went out door-to-door and did some personalized campaigning for their candidates.

Despite their efforts the 2004 elections ended up very one sided. President George W. Bush won the Presidency and Republicans ended up with a majority in the House and Senate. The local elections did not end up well either with Republicans winning the majority of the races.

"We were depressed about our defeat, but we had to get up eventually and we had to create new focuses," Dr. Terry Strieter, College Democrat advisor, said. "One thing we did to keep students politically active was writing letters and making phone calls to our state representatives. Even though our candidate preferences may not have won, we can still have influence on our policy makers. It's relatively easy to have influence if you're active."

Few organizations on campus could boast a name with such meaning as Imago Dei. The college ministry of First United Methodist Church in Murray, whose name was Latin for “image of God,” was a new addition to Murray State in Fall 2004.

“Our ministry grew out of a desire to be more directly involved in the spiritual lives of students on campus,” Reverend Emily Burch, minister for Imago Dei and Associate Pastor at First United Methodist Church, said.

While many students from First United Methodist Church attended the weekly meetings, the fellowship also included students from many other churches and denominations.

“Imago Dei is a warm and inviting group of MSU students, most of the members are United Methodist but we welcome all into our group,” Chris Alexander, senior from Murray and President of Imago Dei, said.

Imago Dei, which met at the United Methodist Campus Fellowship, held a weekly Wednesday night fellowship dinner and devotional, called “Dinner & Devo.” Area churches provided the homemade meal and the devotional was lead by Rev. Burch.

Several members of Imago Dei attended Sunday worship services at First United Methodist Church, as well.

In addition to these weekly events, Imago Dei participated in local service projects and other fun activities. In December, Imago Dei took a team of students to Atmore, Ala. to help with hurricane relief efforts. They planned to participate in mission trips and spiritual retreats such as this each semester.

Not only Rev. Burch, but also an elected student council, organized Imago Dei. The student council consisted of several officers including, President, Discipleship, Publicity, Fellowship and Missions.

“We exist to grow in our relationship with God, one another and to help students grow as faithful servants of Jesus Christ,” Rev. Burch said. “All are welcome who would like to join us in that journey.”

Working to get dinner prepared on time, freshman Jonathan Lemmon puts on the finishing touches. Volunteers provided dinner for each Wednesday night dinner and devotion.

Members of Imago Dei struggle to pull freshman Zac Smith onto a platform as part of an initiatives course. The group traveled to Lakeshore in Eva, Tenn. in the fall for a team-building retreat.

Archaeology Club

With an increased interest in archaeology and the Archaeology program at Murray State growing rapidly, members of the Archaeology Club worked to promote both their organization and the Archaeology Department.

“We want to let incoming and current students know that we’re here, that Murray State offers very beneficial classes, and we have very dedicated staff members,” said Crystal Parrish, junior from Cottage Grove, Tenn. and president of the club.

The Archaeology Club accomplished this task through participation in a variety of activities and contributions to campus. The organization cooperated with the Geology Club to produce a bake sale that raised over $100. The club, which meets twice a month, also planned to visit the mounds in Cahokia, Ill. Members of the Archaeology club enjoyed participating in an excavation at Wickliffe Mounds, located in Ballard County, as well.

“We truly have great student participation and dedication,” Parrish said.

Consisting of both anthropology and archaeology students, the Archaeology Club was accepting of students in both areas.

“We welcome anyone who is interested in either one of these studies and who plans to major or minor in them,” Parrish said.

Advisor to the club was Dr. Kit Wesler, professor of archaeology at Murray State.

“Our advisor is a wonderful mentor and an amazing man,” Parrish said. “We’re very honored to have him at Murray State.”

Members of the Archaeology work on a painting a mural. The unique club met twice a month and participated in several activities.

Campus Scouts

If you thought your days of camping, hiking and service projects as a Girl Scout ended with childhood, think again. The Murray State University Campus Scouts continued this tradition through college. Campus Scouts was a new organization in 2004 and consisted of male and female members who were students, faculty and staff of MSU.

“In addition to being members of the campus organization, Campus Scouts are registered adult volunteers with the Girl Scouts of America,” Karla Johnston, Senior Research Technician in the Center for Reservoir Research, and advisor to the Campus Scouts, said.

According to the official website of the Girl Scouts of the USA, “Campus Girl Scouts volunteer their skills and talents in program activities run directly with girls and teens or use their skills and abilities to provide services at school, in their community, or in their local Girl Scout council.” This was precisely what Murray State’s Campus Scouts did.

In their first year of existence at MSU, the Campus Scouts offered a variety of workshops to local Junior level Girl Scouts, such as their Water Drop Patch Workshop. They also participated in outdoor activities, such as camping and hiking with younger Girl Scout troops.

“We represent our age group at council wide meetings and activities, as well,” Amanda Nelson, president of the Campus Scouts, said.

Johnston said the group would offer an Eco-Action Activity Interest Patch Workshop to Cadette level Girl Scouts in the area. They also planned to take a rafting trip to the New River in West Virginia, which would include working on hiking and horseback riding.

The Campus Scouts proved to be a diverse group, providing support and helpful role models for local youth. Through openness in membership and educational activities, the Campus Scouts had a positive influence on the campus and community.

Said Johnston: “Gender is not an issue, both men and women are welcome to join – and it’s not just Girl Scouts we aim to serve.”

Interior Design

Traveling to urban areas for Interior Design conferences and touring elegant homes sounds like the job of a professional and renowned interior designer. However, this was the life of the members of Murray State's Interior Design Club.

The student chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers started in the mid-1980s at Murray State to provide practical and beneficial design experience to its members. The Interior Design Club, as it was commonly known, was specifically for interior design majors or those interested in the field.

Bridget Miller, president of the club, said they participated in a variety of activities to get their members ready for the real world of interior design. From guest speakers at meetings to fundraisers and socials, members gained a great amount of hands-on experience.

"My hope is to give the members a better understanding of what a real career in interior design will entail, and then prepare them for it," Miller said.

An example of this preparation was the club's annual trip to the Kitchen and Bath Industry Show and Conference. They traveled to such places as Florida or Chicago for the show. The conference featured the latest trends and techniques for kitchen and bath design. Members also gained experience and insight by visiting the Fall SunTrust Parade of Homes in Nashville.

Cynthia Tubbs, Interior Design Club advisor, said she was involved in the club when she attended Murray State. She said the club had always been very active, and as the advisor, she would like to see the club continue to prepare students for the reality of their chosen career.

"For interior design majors, this is one club that they need to be involved in," Tubbs said.

Students involved in the Interior Design Club could apply to be members of the professional chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers after graduation.

Said Tubbs: "The ASID is a professional organization that interior designers really need to be a part of."

Athletic Training

The Murray State Athletics program is nationally known for its sports teams. But behind the scenes, the athletes rely upon the Murray State Athletic trainers to keep them up and running...literally.

The athletic trainers stayed busy during the 2004-2005 school year as not only were they taking care of the athletes, they were taking care of themselves. The athletic training program went through its first ever initial accreditation from the National Athletic Trainers Association.

"This (accreditation) is something I have been working on since I arrived here in 1993," Alan Lollar, head athletic trainer, said.

Murray State's athletic training program provided athletic training students with a clinical setting to study hands on with athletes from the different teams.

"I enjoy being able to get the clinical experience of working with real athletes and not always studying out of a book," Nikki Holland, senior from New Castle said.

The athletic training students had to work with all of the different therapeutic modalities available for treatment while in the athletic training room. The athletic training students also worked closely with the university athletic trainers, Lollar and Eric Frederic, to gain further insight of what it is like to be involved with collegiate athletics.

There is a lot of hard work that goes into athletic training and we appreciate the professionalism given to us by the athletic training students," Tim Haworth, men's basketball graduate assistant, said.

Assistant Athletic Trainer Eric Frederick keeps a close eye on a MSU soccer player. Athletic trainers travelled with all the MSU athletic teams to safeguard their health and wellness.

The 1980's saw Ronald Reagan come into office, MTV bring music videos, the boycott of the Olympics and the beginning of a dominant athletics program rivaled by no other school in the Ohio Valley Conference

The 1980's was a decade of dominance for the Murray State Racer athletic programs. The addition of new coaches, better recruiting and better facilities started a tradition of excellence.

The early '80s saw the first nationally networked televised football game for Murray State in front of 15,000 spectators when they defeated Eastern Kentucky at Stewart Stadium 24-7 to capture the Ohio Valley Conference title. The Racers hosted Lehigh University for a playoff game in the national title race and lost 28-9 finishing the season 9-2-1. This marked the first time the Racers had played in post season action in 31 years.

"The football team won three out of 10 championships, and was on a real roll," Kenny Roth, Interim Athletic Director, said.

The early '80s also began a tradition for other Murray State athletic programs. The Breds' baseball team competed on the national stage at the NCAA Southern Regional Tournament in Starkville, Miss. as they started their decade of dominance of the Ohio Valley Conference. Head coach Johnny "Red" Reagan, said that the biggest thrill of his illustrious career was to see the success of his players on and off of the field. The Breds' baseball team saw a tremendous improvement throughout the '80s as the close of the decade brought for them a new complex as the old diamond was cleared away to make room for the new Martha Lane Collins Industry and Technology building. Reagan Field was named in honor of Coach Reagan for his many years of service and relocated next to Stewart Stadium.

The Racer basketball team began its run of total Ohio Valley Conference domination in the early '80s. The heart of OVC basketball beat through Racer Arena, and its pulse could be felt through its thunderous fans for the majority of the '80s. The Racers won five Ohio Valley Conference Championships during the '80s, but the highlight of the decade was when the Racers defeated North Carolina State in the first round of the NCAA Tournament in 1987. The team was lead by the infamous "M & M" boys, Jeff Martin and Don Mann. The Racers took the storied Kansas Jayhawks into the last 12 seconds of the second round game of the tourney as they lost on 2 free throws to lose the game by three points, 61 – 58. This was the only time the Racer basketball team had ever gone farther than the first round in the NCAA Tournament.

The most dominant Murray State athletic team through the 1980's was the men's tennis team. They won every single championship through the 1980's. The last championship was the toughest as the team had a losing regular season at 15-16.

"This year (1989) there was a tremendous amount of pressure on our shoulders to try and win all of the 80's, and no one wanted to be the one to break the streak," Coach Bennie Purcell said.

The 1982 team placed 6th in the National Invitational Tennis Tournament, which was the equivalent to what is now the NCAA tournament.

The MSU Rifle team had a great decade in the '80s as they achieved national recognition by winning two NCAA national championships in 1985 and 1987. They were second in 1986. The MSU rifle team also gained international recognition with Deena Wigger from Colorado Springs, Co. She was a member of the 1988 Olympic shooting team. Wigger set a new record in collegiate standings and she brought home 10 gold medals from national and international competition.

The women's volleyball team began competition in 1983 and brought home the OVC championship in 1989. The team had a losing regular season at 17-21, but were able to defeat the defending OVC champions, Morehead State University, to capture the program's first ever championship. The team went on to compete at the national level at the first ever Women's Volleyball Championships.

The '80s was one of the most memorable decades for athletics at Murray State producing many moments worth Remembering.

A Winning Tradition

Football

The early morning hours of the first week of August, beneath Stewart Stadium, athletic training students were busy preparing for the beginning of football two-a-day practices. The 2004-2005 Racer Football program looked to turn around from the previous season on the strength of 19 seniors, a fresh influx of transfers and the addition of Dennis Therrell as the new defensive coordinator.

In the first game, the Racers showed they had definitely improved on the defensive side of the ball as they defeated Glenville State 56 to 3, allowing the Glenville State offense to only gain 192 yards and posting 604 yards offensively themselves. The Racers rushed for 373 yards and junior college transfer QB Adam Fisher passed for 231 yards and gave Racer fans high expectations for the season.

The second game found the Racers on the road in front of 35,129 spectators as they lost 52 to 14 to the University of Connecticut Huskies. One positive from this game was a 94-yard kick return by the Racers to tie the game at 14 going into the half. Head Coach Joe Pannunzio said only positive things come from competing against the bigger schools, "as it gets you ready for conference play."

On September 18, the Racers traveled to Indiana State where the Racers posted 452 yards of offense with three rushing touchdowns, while holding Indiana State to only 278 yards. But a punt return for a touchdown put the Racers on the losing end 28-21.

The Ohio Valley Conference schedule began with the Racers hosting Tennessee Tech on September 25 at Stewart Stadium in front of 6845 in attendance. The Racer offense again proved its potency as it posted 354 yards with three rushing touchdowns and one passing touchdown for a 35 to 19 win. The defense again helped lead the way to victory by allowing only 41 rushing yards in the game.

"The football games at home have become more fun to watch this year because of the (teams) more exciting plays and the better defense," Nikki Holland, senior athletic training student from New Castle, said.

A 2 and 2 overall, and a 1 and 0 record in conference along with an explosive offense and stingy defense set up an early match-up of OVC powerhouses as the Racers traveled to Jacksonville State to battle the Gamecocks for conference supremacy. Despite an awesome offensive production of 469 yards and the defense only allowing 363 total offensive yards for Jacksonville, a costly punt return for a touchdown, and unusual goal line defense put an L in the win/loss column for the Racers as they fell 35-14 relinquishing sole possession of 1st place to Jacksonville.

October 9 brought Homecoming to Murray State as the Racers hosted Samford. The Racers stormed out with a 21-0 lead, but Samford regrouped at halftime to come back on the Racers in the second half. With possible embarrassment on homecoming looming over their heads, the Racers managed to squeak out a field goal to post a 24-21 win in front of a homecoming crowd of 6,451.

The Racers hit the road to Charleston, Ill. to play Eastern Illinois in what would be their worst offensive performance of the year. The sluggish production of only 231 yards and uncharacteristic defensive play giving up 394 yards saw the Racers fall 24-9.

The Racers went on to win the rest of the regular season as they defeated Southeast Missouri 28-13, University of Tennessee at Martin 38 - 0, and defeating Tennessee State 30-13. The end of the season did, however, hold the most exciting game as the Racers traveled to Eastern Kentucky. The Racers and Colonels went to overtime in front of 12,200 in attendance. The Racers rallied late in the fourth and hit a 21-yard field goal in overtime to win the game.

The Racers finished the regular season 2nd in the OVC. The season was considered a success by Coach Pannunzio as the Racers will lose the 19 seniors, but return with a lot of heart to get the 2005 campaign started in the spring.

"I am thrilled to death by our football program," Kenny Roth, Interim Athletic Director, said. "Coach 'P' teaches life skills, and stresses academics over athletics."

Kickin' into high gear

Soccer

The Murray State Women's soccer team scored their way into MSU history during the Ohio Valley Conference 2004 season, ending strong with a 9-8 finish.

Mike Minielli, fifth season head coach for MSU women's soccer, said the highlight of the season was the season itself.

"We have a young team with only six players who played large minutes last year," Minielli said. "It is amazing how this group jelled and learned to play in such a short period of time."

Minielli said while the coaching techniques on the field had not changed, they adjusted their recruiting process, which made a difference in this year's team.

Minielli got what he recruited and the 2004 season proved that.

Theresa Reedy, senior from St. Ann, Mo., was the leading Ohio Valley Conference scorer.

"We needed a kid to step it up this year and carry us a bit while we work in all of our new players," said Minielli, in an interview with the Racer Insider. "Theresa has done that with her goal scoring and also with her leadership."

For Reedy, it's the love of the game that pushed her on the field.

"I've always loved sports," said Reedy, in an interview with the Racer Insider. "I started playing when I was six on rec teams and then I started playing select under-nine."

Reedy said that soccer is not like any other sport.

"It's non-stop all the time," Reedy said. "There are no timeouts or pauses. You can't just stop when you're tired or go out and come back. It requires a lot of endurance."

Minielli pointed out that all the players on his team have talent.

"The players set themselves apart with their ability to deal with pressure, failure, and the challenge of being successful on a day to day basis," Minielli said.

Erin Blackman, senior from Lexington, was an example of this.

"She comes off the bench for us in most games," Minielli said. "Coming off the bench is difficult as she does not know from game to game what her minutes will be or in what role she may play."

In addition to the rigors of being a student-athlete, Minielli encouraged his team to take part in community activities.

"Our extra-curricular activities are very important to the player's education," Minielli said. "Many young soccer players from the area look up to our players and want to be just like them."

Although some students did not want the exposure of being the visible part of the university, Minielli said it was part of being a student-athlete and was something that helps them with their life skills.

Minielli said his whole team volunteered for the The Outreach Program for Soccer, which is a team open to any disabled child.

Minielli said contributing to the community was not limited to student-athletes.

Said Minielli: "All of us at MSU are a big part of this community and we need to give back whenever we can."

Golf

Murray State's men and women's golf team made a difference in the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament.

MSU's men's team placed second at the OVC Tournament with a combined score of 910 and just four shots short of the champion, Jacksonville State (906). Murray State's line-up consisted of three sophomores and two freshmen for this 54-hole event. Second year coach, Eddie Hunt, was proud of his young team.

"I'm really proud of my guys because they put together three very consistent rounds and we were in it until the very end," Hunt said. "To be as young as we are, I'm very pleased with the way we handled everything this week. This is a good finish for us, though we did have our sights set on the title."

Sophomore Kyle Shirley from Fountain Run earned a tie for fourth place out of 55 golfers with a combined score of 226. Also, Will Cox, sophomore from Paducah, finished in a ninth-place tie with a score of 229 by shooting par on the final day of the tournament.

"I was really excited entering the last round with the lead," Shirley said. "However, I did not play that well, but I was still excited with a fourth place finish."

Other highlights from the season was MSU's first place finish at the Morehead State Eagle Invitational held at Silver Springs Shores Country Club in Ocala, Fla. on April 13, 2004.

Nicholas Griffen, sophomore from Hawesville, and Shirley tied for titlelist honors in the 30-golfer meet with a score of 223. Griffen tied a single-round tournament best with a second-round score of 72.

The lady's golf team earned its third straight OVC championship with a score of 963, 14 strokes in front of the second place finisher Tennessee Tech (977) at the 54-hole event. This is the Lady Racers sixth OVC title in just 11 seasons.

"Each year is different with different players, but the hard work pays off," Coach Velvet Milkman said. "We were one of the top two most talented teams in the conference."

Senior Nikki Orazine of paducah became the third consecutive Lady Racer to win the OVC Golfer of the Year award after shooting a combined score of 234.

"Nikki has been a very important part of the program since she entered as a freshman," Milkman said. "She has been a part of three OVC Championships and it was very exciting to see her named as the OVC Player of the Year."

Milkman won her sixth OVC Coach of the Year award in just 11 seasons.

"Coach Milkman worked with every aspect of the game, physically and mentally, and she was why we are so good," Orazine said. "She was the reason why we had such a good program."

Volleyball

Watching the senior volleyball players stand hand in hand for the National Anthem, you could get a sense of the team's attitude throughout the season. With their share of obstacles, they continued on, stuck together and did the best they could.

After the Murray State volleyball team became the Ohio Valley Conference champions during the 2003 season, fans expected as much or better for the 2004 season. However, due to the loss of three starters and several unforeseen injuries, their season was not as everyone expected.

"This year, it wasn't an easy year," Katherine Kemezeys, sophomore from Fairview, Ill., said. "But we all worked hard."

Even though they did not have a winning season, the players stayed dedicated to the game. They continued to practice and work as hard as they ever did, if not harder.

"I think all of our hard work and dedication really started to show this year," Danielle Sutterer, senior from Perryville, Mo., said.

"It was a good year," Lashley said. "It was tough, but it was a good year."

The transition from a 24-6 season to a 5-16 season was not easy for any of the players.

"Last year our record was so awesome," Kemezeys said. "This year we are having tougher luck."

"We still have a lot of good fans, but people on campus being negative, that was the hardest thing," Lashley said. "That was hard going from last year to this year."

The hardest part for many was that they knew they had the ability to have a better season than they did.

"What kept us going was each other, knowing that this year was the only chance to play together as a team," Sutterer said. "So we went out there and played our best to see what we could do."

The players credited head volleyball coach Dave Schwepeker for keeping the team so positive and persistent.

"He stuck by us and tried to keep pushing us," Kemezeys said. "He is a father figure to us girls. We know if anything ever happened, he would be right there. He would have our back."

Because the team was much like a family it was especially hard for the team to see the seniors leave.

Although their season was not ideal, the volleyball players valued their experiences. The things they learned from themselves and each other were irreplaceable.

Said Sutterer: "From all of the adversity that we have gone through we just kept getting to know each other more and more on and off the court."

Men's Basketball

Murray State's men's basketball team had a rebuilding year with a crucial loss in the first round of the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament.

After last year's run to the National Collegiate Athletic Association Tournament, nine veteran players graduated.

However, Murray State was still selected to be No.1 in the preseason poll with Tennessee State in second and Eastern Kentucky taking third place.

The men's basketball season had many obstacles in its schedule. Murray State played NCCA Tournament participants Southern Illinois, Texas-San Antonio and Alabama at Birmingham. Also, the Racers would play National Invitational Tournament participant Missouri at Columbia and regional rival Western Kentucky.

The Racers were selected to be involved in the ESPN Bracket Buster Saturday and played Western Athletic Conference opponent Rice.

At Mizzou Arena, the Racers were defeated 59-55 by the Missouri Tigers in Columbia after leading by seven points in the middle of the second half.

"Once we forgot who we were playing and where we were playing, we settled in," Mick Cronin, head coach, said. "It seemed we played defense an awful lot in the last three or four minutes."

Trey Pearson, junior from South Fulton, Tenn. led the Racers with 16 points, four assists and six steals. Issian Redding, junior from Sandusky, Ohio, scored 15 points on 6-for-11 shooting.

The Racers traveled to University of Texas-San Antonio to defeat the Roadrunners 69-58. Junior guard Darnell Hopkins, from Baltimore, Md., had a career game by scoring 17 points in 23 minutes of play.

"Darneel played hard on every play, every day," Cronin said. "He had since practice started."

In the first round of the OVC tournament, the Racers were defeated by South East Missouri State 61-58. Shawn Witherspoon, sophomore from Oviedo, Fla., led the Racers with 15 points, but could not convert the three-point attempt with five seconds left in the game for a win.

"In a dog fight, it comes down to who hits shots," Cronin said. "We missed ours, they hit theirs."

Murray State finished the season with a record of 17-11.

Pearson was named to the OVC First Team, which was selected by head coaches and sports information directors in the conference.

Pearson ended the season with 391 points, which was 14.5 points per game with a 45 percent shooting percentage. His season-high in points was 28 and he did this on two occasions, against Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville and Morehead State. Also, Pearson led the Racers with 52 steals and ranked fifth in the league.

The 2004-2005 Murray State Thoroughbreds Baseball team began their season just as their moniker name, like champion race horses. They got off to their best season start since 1983 going 10 and 5. The 'Breds were led by 2nd year skipper and former MSU player Rob McDonald.

"It feels good to be here," McDonald said. "We've got a lot of work to do. Our players have been working hard and have been very receptive to what we are trying to instill."

The roster was loaded with talent this year returning from the 2003-2004 squad. The three best hitters returned, and the pitching staff was helped by the influx of some very talented freshman recruits.

One of the big early highlights was when the Missouri Tigers came to Reagan Field to face a surging Thoroughbred squad. The 'Breds took a 4-0 lead after four innings, and held on to win 6-5 after the Tigers made a valiant comeback effort.

"The Tigers made several mistakes today, but they were facing a very ready Murray squad," Bill Whitaker, Interim Athletic Director, said.

Another memorable moment was the Ohio Valley Conference season opener against South East Missouri State. The 'Breds were down to their last out in the ninth inning down 6-2, when back to back two run homers tied the game at 6 all. Finally, in the bottom of the 13th inning, third baseman Alex Stewart hit a right field double to score the winning run.

"The 'Breds have won and lost in dramatic fashion this year," Dave Winder, Sports Information Director, said.

The season came down to the OVC tourney held in Paducah. The 'Breds were in familiar territory, being a 12 time OVC championship program. The Racers finished the season strong ending several games by a one run decision. The 'Breds finished the season, before the tournament with 26 wins and 30 losses. They were much improved over the previous year, but far and away from the goals of the '04-'05 squad. The next season was filled with promise and hope, as the 2005-2006 recruiting classes was one of the best ever for the Thoroughbred Program.

Run like a Racer...

Running

The financial downfall of athletics at the post secondary level of education in Kentucky found the Murray State Cross Country and Track teams having to hurdle through a lot of adversity this year according to Kenny Roth interim athletic director.

The teams have lost a lot of funding, especially the men's team, they lost their scholarships, Roth said.

"I don't know if I can continue to go to school if they take our (women's team) funding away," Magen Rainville, junior from Louisville, said. "The other sports don't seem to have the money problems that we do, but cost more to have."

Roth said through the creative use of financial aid, the athletes that were affected the most were able to continue to compete for the university and they were still allowed to use all of the resources that are utilized by the other university teams.

"Our biggest obstacle is fundraising and outside revenue," Roth said.

The money specifically raised for track was earmarked for them.

"The good thing is that it (Track and Field) covers six sports, which is a large percentage of our student-athletes," Roth said. "Most people see that Track and Field sports are token sports, but we don't, and we found a new coaching staff to help in all sports"

The athletic department spent a great deal of time looking for a new coach who could help in all aspects of track and field.

Roth said the track and field teams benefited from the efforts of the new coaching staff because they were fundamentally sound in all the sports involved.

"We never really had a coach, and I came here just for track," Emily Rader, junior from Liberty, said. "The teams organized our own practices and did a lot of our own meets; it was really hard to get motivated."

"We are on a national search to find the best candidate for a coach that will be a coach for all our track and field teams," Roth said. "We know that this is a great school that is able to grow"

Rader said the track team was a positive representative of the university, and those who participated in track chose to do it and make the most of it. Because the track team competes more than any other sport, it is more visible at other universities.

"We compete hard just like the other schools, and at the large meets you see all the money the big schools have in their programs and sometimes get jealous," Rader said. "But, I didn't quit because of money or coaching situations, it was just time to move on."

The 2004 season opened for the Murray State Women's Tennis Team and seemed, at first, to catch the team off-guard.

Their two opening games in February were both disappointing 0-7 losses at Mississippi and Missouri.

"I wasn't really interested in sports, but I started watching the tennis teams play and realized that it is no longer scored with loves!" Kristine Brown, senior from Fulton, said.

The team regained their footing, however, in a 4-3 win over Iowa State followed by a 6-1 loss at Alabama.

March 4 heralded the beginning of a winning streak for Murray State as the team went on to steal five straight wins over Southern Illinois, Miami State, Tennessee State, Jacksonville State and Samford.

A 3-4 upset at Alabama-Birmingham ended their streak but the team was back on track with a 7-0 stomping at Birmingham Southern.

Overall, in conference play, the women's tennis team held their 7-1 position through the end of the spring 2005 semester.

Anna Lask, sophomore from Louisville, was named Ohio Valley Conference Player of the Week in March, 2005.

According to athletic statistics, Lask went undefeated in singles and doubles [March, 2005], with a combined 6-0 mark in OVC play. Lask, along with her sister Rachael, helped lead Murray State to a league-lead-tying 3-0 record and an overall 6-4 mark.

Like the women's team, the Murray State Men's Tennis Team's 2004/2005 season opened with two non-conference losses at Louisville and Indiana.

"I live in Regents, and I like stopping by and seeing the tennis teams playing," Ashley Spink, junior from Louisville, said. "Plus, some of the guys are really cute."

They rebounded their efforts, however, and secured their first win at Vincennes followed by a loss at Southern Indiana.

In their first conference game, the Racers delivered a punishing 7-0 victory to Tennessee State on their turf.

In light of their first conference win of the season, the Racers played their next eight games with high expectations but fell short every time. Their losses included four conference games against Jacksonville State, Samford, Eastern Kentucky and Morehead State and four non-conference losses against Alabama-Birmingham, Kentucky, Memphis and Southern Illinois.

Rowing

In a sport truly characterized by teamwork, the Murray State women's rowing team triumphantly ended the 2004 season and raised the bar of expectation for 2005.

The Head of the Chattahoochee Race, the place of victory for the Racers, was held November 6-7 in Gainesville, Ga., on Lake Lanier. The novice four Racers walked away from the race with a gold medal to add to the other two golds they won against Vanderbilt in a dual meet in October, 2004.

The novice four won its 38-boat race on the 5,000-meter course in a time of 23 minutes, 22 seconds, which placed them a full 13.8 seconds ahead of second-place Miami.

The novice eight Racers brought home a bronze medal for third place in their 34-boat race with a time of 20 minutes, 19 seconds, which placed them just 19 seconds behind second-place North Carolina and 34.9 seconds behind first-place Georgia.

"The racing for both novice boats went exceptionally well, since this was the first time they had a chance to race two three-mile races in one day, less than three hours apart," said MSU assistant rowing coach, Marko Vukovic, in an interview with Murray State Athletics.

Vukovic said some of the crews the Racers beat included schools with much bigger rosters and recruited freshmen rowers, while Murray State boasted of true novices who had only been rowing for two months.

"Despite that, our novice teams haven't placed lower than third place in their competitions," Vukovic said.

While the rowing team enjoyed a Christmas break, they did not have the leisurely four and a half weeks off that most Murray State students reveled in. Instead, the rowing team was back to work on January 3, in Natchitoches, La. for 13 days of winter training.

The team arrived back at Murray State in preparation for the spring semester and their annual competition, the Racer Regatta, held April 2 on Kentucky Lake.

Rifle

The Murray State Rifle Team has become one of the most prominent but anonymous athletic teams on campus. While basketball and football were getting the majority of the media coverage, the Murray State Rifle team amassed an unprecedented record and reputation of excellence.

Morgan Hicks, an eight-time All-American from Murray State, stated that she came to Murray State just to be on the rifle team. Hicks represented Murray State well as she won the NCAA air-rifle national championship and went on to the 2004 Olympic Games in Athens, Greece. Hicks shot the highest score for the U.S. and placed 12th overall.

Head-coach Ann Proctor said being on a team where there is not a lot of media coverage is hard, but at least the intrinsic rewards for participation can make up for not being in the spotlight.

The 2004-2005 season saw the rifle team win the OVC championship in the spring. One of the many highlights of the season was when the rifle team defeated University of Kentucky on a tiebreaker.

Senior Robert Purdy, from Gainesville, Texas, led all shooters with a score of 1169 out of a possible 1200, having shot 584 out of a possible 600 in smallbore and a 585 out of a possible 600 in air rifle. He scored a 199, one shot short of a perfect score, in the prone round of smallbore.

Freshman Cameron Hicks, Morgan Hicks' brother, shot a score 1166, with a 588 in smallbore and a 578 in air rifle. Hicks shot a 199 in the kneeling portion and a 198 in the smallbore round.

Sophomore Josiah Brooks, from Creston, Wash., shot an 1145 with a 570 in smallbore and a 575 in air rifle, having fired a 199 in the prone position of smallbore, while junior Alex Culberston, from Salem, Ore., shot an 1137 with a 563 in smallbore and a 574 in air rifle.

The rifle team has been one of the most successful teams at Murray State according to Kenny Roth, Interim Athletic Director.

"Because of the Olympians and the championship teams, the rifle teams have been a very positive reflection on our athletics department at Murray State," Roth said.

Aiming for her target, sophomore Brandy Boucher, from Henderson, intimidates the camera during the collegiate sectionals held at Murray State. The Racers placed 4th in the meet.

The Racer rifle team is missing their ace from the previous season, Olympian Morgan Hicks. The rifle team was in jeopardy of not making the NCAA Championships for the first time ever.

Shooting for a Dream

The sun rises over a small farm near Roy, Wash. where a 12-year-old Morgan Hicks is being introduced to the talent that would one day bring her a college education and the chance to live an Olympic dream.

Hicks, senior Physical Education major at Murray State University, began her meteoric rise to stardom when her family introduced her to shooting pop cans in the backyard.

Not long after that, she joined a shooting club with her brother. At the age of 12 most young kids are just beginning to find many different interests that consume their time...young Hicks was not any different.

Having to choose between her two favorite pastimes, shooting and fast pitch softball, Hicks had to make a grown up decision at a very young age.

Hicks said trying to figure out which love would help take her farther was tough, but knowing that scholarships were hard to come by she decided taking the shooting route was her best chance at a college education.

With the hard part out of the way, Hicks began her climb at what would lead her to the top. After achieving a scholarship to Murray State, Hicks set her first goal...achieving top honors in the Ohio Valley Conference.

Check.

Check.

After winning the national championship, Hicks found herself at the U.S. Olympic tryouts leading after the first round of competition. The second day she found herself in third place, knowing that only the top two make the team. The last day of competition, Hicks turned in an amazing performance to nab one of the two available spots that would take her to the 2004 Summer Olympics in Athens, Greece

As Hicks and the United States team entered the Olympic competition in Athens, Greece, she hear a cheer coming from the coliseum floor that she would never forget..."USA, USA, USA."

For a 22-year-old woman with a love of hunting, fishing and camping, Hicks said this was an experience she would never have imagined.

"I would not seek the spotlight for myself, I just believe in working hard and being a quiet competitor," Hicks said.

Hicks said the shooting venue was over an hour away from Olympic headquarters and nearly every single moment was filled with practice, so there was not a lot of time for site seeing.

But the practicing paid off. Hicks turned a very impressive performance at the Olympics finishing this Olympiad at 12th in the world, and the highest scoring member of the U.S. team.

The rifle team did get to travel to a few close places. Hicks said that one special moment was when the mayor of one town gave a personal tour to the U.S. team.

Hicks said being a part of the US Olympic team is very hard, and even those on the rifle team had to abide by all the rules and regulations as those that are on the more prominent events.

"We have to watch what we eat, no caffeine or extra sugar to raise our heart rate," Hicks said. "We are also subject to random drug testing. We have to give them a schedule of where we are going to be at for everyday for three months at a time."

Hicks said she was very grateful for the support of her family. Her parents raised $10,000 to travel to Athens to be with her while she competed.

Hicks planned on finishing her degree, pursuing a master's degree and trying out for the 2008 Olympics.

Hicks said she had more dreams to achieve...teaching at an elementary school and coaching rifle at the collegiate level.

Said Hicks: "This will never seem real till I am telling my grandkids about it."

MSU Intramurals

Fraternities, sororities, residential colleges and independents battled nearly every night to be able to boast they were the champions of their perspective conferences.

Recreational intramurals offered everything from flag football to softball, and nearly every sport in between. Competition began soon after school started and went throughout the whole school year with different sports beginning every few weeks.

"I liked the way you could play in an organized sport even if you don't go out for the intercollegiate team," Blair Blurnett, freshman from Benton, said. "It's the only chance to play a good competitive game."

Each conference in the intramurals program competed among themselves for supremacy and the All Sports Trophy. The independent teams were strongly encouraged throughout the year to participate.

"We always strive to have independents to participate because intramurals are for everyone," Allison Epperson, director of student recreation, said.

"Intramurals are a lot more laid back than regular league type games, and they offer everyone who wants to participate a chance to be a part of a team," Josh Holland, graduate student from Louisville, said.

Residential Colleges

Residential Colleges Remembered

Residential Colleges were introduced and eight College Heads were interviewed and chosen.

A tragic fire in Hester College killed one student and left 300 homeless.

Sprinklers and security cameras were installed in each Residential College.

1999

here other universities talk about residential life, Murray State delivers it: academic guidance, social functions, recreational facilities," according to the Murray State Web site.

One way in which Murray State stood out from other public universities was because of its form of on-campus housing. Murray State faculty wanted an alternative form of housing, one that would help students to get more involved.

During the 1996 school year, the nine dorms were turned into eight residential colleges. With the start of residential colleges, Murray State became the first public university to offer the residential college system.

The original colleges born in 1996 included Clark, Elizabeth, Hart, Hester, Regents, Richmond, Springer/Franklin and White Colleges. Dorms Springer and Franklin combined to make one residential college.

The goal of the residential colleges at Murray State was an attempt to increase retention among students living on and off campus. The eight Residential Colleges at Murray were established in hopes of creating an environment of learning outside the classroom. Murray State also wanted to build a community within the residential colleges that included faculty as well as students.

The purpose of Residential Colleges was to create a system and community not achieved with the more common form of university housing, the dormitory. They served as a small community within the larger college community by providing leadership opportunities and programs unique to each Residential College.

Each college formed a residential college council. The RCC was a governing body over the residential college, which provided programs for its residents and made decisions for the college.

After forming the residential colleges Murray State also formed a Residential College Association. Each RCC president was a member of the RCA. Also, each residential college elected a representative from their college who attended the RCA meetings.

Each faculty member was also a Residential College member. Many faculty assisted with programs, attended meetings and helped the residential colleges in other ways.

Each residential college was assigned a faculty member as their college head. They strived to help involve and guide the residents. Each year the college heads would have meetings with each of the new members of their college. They also served as the advisor for the college's RCC.

The original college heads included: Steve Horwood, James Schemp, Corky Broughton, Ron Cella, Ted Brown, Nancey France, Jane Hall and Allen White.

In 2004, Clark College Head Steve Horwood was the last remaining of the original college heads.

Murray State opted not to divide the colleges into subjects, gender, interests or classification, thus creating a more diverse community in the residential college system. Because of the diversity in the colleges, students were able to learn more from each other, learn to be more tolerant and grow to be well-rounded individuals.

After they were established in 1996, the Residential Colleges became participants in many campus traditions. Events such as All Campus Sing added a residential college division. They could be seen at events such as the Homecoming parade, Tent City and several fraternity and sorority philanthropy events.

Since the system was so successful other universities visited Murray so that they could model their housing after the residential colleges. Murray strived to make sure the success of the residential colleges was continued in the future.

Clark College

Working hard to make a difference

"Stand Up, Step Out, and Be Heard," was the motto for Clark College this year as residents made an effort to stand out and make a difference.

The Crusaders began the year by honoring the victims of the September 11 attacks. They invited local police, firemen and the racer patrol to come to Clark and be recognized. Resident advisors read monologues from survivors of the attack.

"We played a video of the events on the side of the building," Residential College Council President Heather Stroupe, sophomore from Radcliff, said. "We got lots of thank-you letters from everyone who came."

Residents participated in the Homecoming festivities. They elected a King and Queen, who walked in the parade.

Many residents express their personalities through the decorations in their rooms. Some were cleaner than others.

Crusaders

For Halloween, they constructed Clark Castle, a mini-haunted house in the lounge of the residential college. After playing, the children trick-or-treated in the residents' rooms.

As the holidays approached, the residents prepared for the Sadie Hawkins Holiday Banquet. Residents had dinner, danced and took pictures in rocking chairs.

"Everyone dressed like hillbillies and had a very good time," Stroupe said.

"We had two charging Crusaders in the 12 Days of Christmas and two of our residents played musical instruments," Stroupe said.

In the spring, Clark sponsored a Medieval Festival. It featured food and costumes from the time period.

"There were sword fights and tarot card readers," Stroupe said. "It's one of the biggest social events of the year."

In March, the residents took on a serious subject by participating in Dead Day. Two students were selected to wear black T-shirts at certain times of the day to signify when someone died in an alcohol-related accident. They were not allowed to speak to anyone, but could hand out cards to explain the project.

The students also worked two games at the RSEC and held a pancake breakfast for fundraisers.

In addition, they held penny wars to raise money for the United Way.

After returning from the holiday break, the Crusaders sold Valentine messages to be delivered to residents and held a Superbowl party, complete with chicken, bar-b-que and chips.

In the spring, the residents had a luau and "Dude Looks Like a Lady" contest.

Clark College worked hard to be involved on campus and make a difference for its residents.

Said Stroupe: "We strive to do our best in everything we can."

Elizabeth College

Where family means everything

The Eagles of Elizabeth College were involved with almost every activity on campus. They had residents involved as student ambassadors, in the dance company, and in the band and concert choir. They were determined to make themselves known as an active and fun member of the residential college community.

"Lizo," the college's unofficial nickname, is a close-knit community of students and faculty who pride themselves on creating a family environment for their residents. They even have their own chant, which is performed at select Lizo events and only for the ears of Lizo residents.

The Eagles had a busy holiday season filled with community service and parties. The students were involved with the Hanging of the Green in the Curris Center.

Disgruntled Elizabeth residents wait around in the cold to be let back into the building. Moments earlier, the fire alarm had gone off and everyone was forced into the amphitheater.

Eagles

"We read a poem, sang two songs and the Elizabeth College Chorale performed," College Head Bob Valentine said.

Lizo is the only college with its own chorus, the Chorale.

Thanksgiving was also a busy time for the residents. They held a progressive dinner for students and faculty. Valentine explained that two floors teamed together and were in charge of a food dish. Residents started at the top floor with their plates and received the first dish on the Thanksgiving menu. They continued down the stairs, getting more food on every floor. The faculty also brought food and everyone enjoyed eating and preparing the meal together.

In conjunction with Hester College, the Eagles celebrated Mardi Gras for the third year in a row. They elected a King and Queen, held a dance and invited the faculty to the celebration.

For Halloween, residents participated in a costume contest and karaoke competition. They told ghost stories and snacked on punch and cookies. To help organize all the activities, Lizo had two social chairs, one male and one female.

"We wanted to have a male and female perspective, so everyone would want to attend all the events," Valentine said.

Homecoming was a hectic time for the Lizo residents. They had their own King and Queen who were decided by penny wars, which went to the Relay for Life. Alumni Harvey Elder, an antique car collector, loaned the Eagles a car for the parade, Valentine said.

Charity and community service were themes in Elizabeth College this year. They participated in the Relay for Life by holding clothing drives and the RCA shoebox toy drive. In addition, the honor society raised money for United Way Fun Run and the Women's Center.

For the senior members of the college, a graduation breakfast was held on Dec. 18. They held a ceremony where the honor graduates received the stole with the crest of Elizabeth College. The Outstanding Academic and Service awards were also awarded.

"It's not just a dormitory, it means something to be a member of our college," Valentine said.

With that theme in mind, residents were treated to a How-To-Prepare for Finals seminar by Dr. Bob McGaughey. They also had the chance to enroll in their own English or Humanities class in the fall. The course, held in the Industry and Technology building, was for Lizo residents only and strived to bring the residents closer together as a family.

Elizabeth College works hard to involve all the students in the residential college.

"The difference lies in the programming," Valentine said, "Students have eight more opportunities to be presidents or vice-presidents. Students are 1 of 168 people in the college, instead of 1 in 10,000 at MSU."

Residents of Hart College Plan Programs To Aid Life House

Hart College Council and Resident Advisors worked hard to assist many worthy charities in the 2004-2005 school year. One charity Hart chose to focus on was Life House.

Life House was an organization that assisted pregnant women, by giving them emotional support as well as providing the babies with items they needed.

Hart Resident Advisor, Katie Nimmo, wanted to help provide the babies of Life House with supplies they needed. To accomplish her goals, she decided to have a baby shower and invite everyone in Hart to attend. To get into the shower the residents had to bring a baby gift.

Those who attended the program played games that were played at many baby showers. The residents really enjoyed watching the male residents get competitive at a baby shower.

Residents of Hart hang out in Hart's front lobby. Hart was the largest residential college on campus.

Ravens

"It was hilarious watching all the guys chug the baby bottles full of apple juice just to win a prize," Andrea Hermann, senior from Owensboro, said.

The program was very successful. Twenty-six residents attended and they collected many items to donate to Life House.

"It was fun and different," Hermann said. "As long as I have been here I have never seen a baby shower done before. A lot of people turned out to see what it was all about."

Many residents attended the program out of curiosity, but they left knowing that they were able to help a family in need.

Nimmo's program was not the only program Hart College put together to support Life House. Another Hart R.A., Elaine Roper chose to assist Life House as well.

"I wanted to do something for Life House because they offer a support system for women who are pregnant and need help," Roper, senior from Princeton, said. "I think it is a great organization and I really wanted to help, but I did not know what I could do."

Roper was inspired while attending a Kentucky Resident Advisor Conference. At the K.R.A. Conference, she attended a session on community service where they presented a program where baby bottles were passed out to residents to collect their spare change in. The change was then donated to a charity.

"As soon as I heard the idea I knew it was the perfect way to help support Life House," Roper said.

Twenty-five residents participated in the program. With the resident's help Roper was able to raise alot of money to help support Life House.

"I came from a single-parent family and I know how hard it can be for a single parent to financially support a family," Roper said. "I was super excited to help."

Life House was not the only charity Hart residents supported through programs. Megan Claussen, Hart R.A teamed up with Scott McDonnell, a Richmond R.A., to support Lance Armstrong's Charity LiveStrong. They sold the LiveStrong arm bracelets in the Curris Center. Together, Hart and Richmond Raised $300 to donate to the LiveStrong Foundation.

Hart College residents pulled together and made a difference in many people's lives and had fun while doing it.

Hester College

Continuing a Winning Tradition

The fans were screaming, the coaches were planning and the players were playing with all their heart. This was the scene everyone witnessed at any Hester College athletic event.

Hester College Athletics were very well known across campus. Hester athletes were not only known for their athletic talent, but for their dedication and sportsmanship as well. Hester athletes were respected by all the other teams in the residential college division.

White College Athletic Director, Ashley Hagen was very impressed by Hester College.

A resident of Hester entertains those in the lobby with a song on Hester's piano. Hester's lobby was often filled with music that residents and guests made on that piano.

Hedgehogs

"It's always fun to play Hester in any sport," Hagen, sophomore from Owensboro, said. "They always prove to be strong competition. You always know its going to be a fun, competitive and clean game."

The Hedgehogs were not exactly humble, though. They wore their "Hester 3 Back On Top.....again" T-shirts with great pride to let everyone know they were the All Sports Champions three years running. They would not hesitate to tell you that they planned on continuing to hold the title for the 2004-2005 as well.

However, with winning records in all intramural sports its difficult to be humble. After softball season they were struggling for Hedgehogs, but before flag football season was over they were "Back On Top.....again," ending the season in the number one position.

Hester president, Robby Osting was one of the many Hedgehogs proud of their athletic teams. He played softball, football and volleyball for Hester and he coached basketball.

"It [coaching] was pretty much the only way that I could contribute to the basketball team," Osting, senior from Louisville, said. "It gets pretty ugly when a player also coaches, I felt it was best for me to coach."

Ashley Hurt, sophomore from Newburgh, Ind., was so impressed with Hester's sports she decided she wanted to become more involved. She became the Female Athletic Director for the 2004- 2005 school year.

"I was already so involved in intramural sports, it seemed like the next step," Hurt said.

Hurt said the reason intramurals were so successful at Hester was because everyone at Hester gets involved.

"Everyone in the college gets so involved in intramural sports," Hurt said. "They like being involved in it."

The support of the fans helps a great deal, Hurt said.

"We have a pretty decent fan base," Hurt said. "It definitely helps when there are more fans there."

"There is an element of pride to it," Osting said. "It's not just something that everyone goes out and does just to get out of their rooms. They play to win."

Hester's success cannot be contributed to one athlete.

"There are a lot of people who stand out, so I couldn't pick just one," Hurt said.

All the teams of Hester are equal as well as the players. Both the male and female athletic teams are successful.

"If the males win in one sport, the girls come back in when in one sport that the boys might not win in," Hurt said. "Yeah, they are pretty equal."

Said Osting: "Both have their strengths. All in all both contribute as much as the other."

Regents College

Striving To Make a Difference in the Community

The residents of Regents College worked hard to stand out on campus.

To help ease the transition back to school, the residents hosted a Welcome Party the first weekend. Students grilled food and played volleyball.

"It's a good way for the new students to come out and get to know each other," Andrea Morrow, resident advisor and senior from Brookport, Ill., said.

The Rhinos began the year by participating in Homecoming festivities. They decorated the lobby with pictures of residents and streamers. In conjunction with the theme, "Thanks for the Memories," they made a filmstrip out of paper to line the sidewalk for residents to sign.

"We made balloon people and put the RA's faces on them," Morrow said. "We dressed them in our clothes and put signs about our programs on them. It was lots of fun."

To celebrate the holidays, residents hosted an international dinner.

The pool table is usually a popular place for Regents residents to hang out. But on this night, Ryan Rogers was the only one interested in playing.

Rhinos

"We had international students cook meals from their countries and our residents cooked meals from their hometowns," Morrow said.

For Halloween, they celebrated the Spanish holiday, "Day of the Dead."

They held a carnival and had caramel apples.

"It was really interesting to learn the differences between the Spanish and American versions of the same holiday," Morrow said.

In the spring semester, residents held a Super Bowl party in the lobby with Bar-B-Que from Bad Bob's.

The Rhinos held several fundraisers for the Relay for Life. In February they conducted a date auction for the residents.

"Squire (Regents' college head) even auctioned off his parking spot for a week," Morrow said.

They also held a pool tournament, poker tournament, bake sale and car wash.

"I held a "Whose Line is it Anyway" improv competition," Morrow said. "It was $5 a team to enter."

In the spring, they participated in a homerun derby contest for Relay for Life. Residents pledged money for each homerun hit.

In order to encourage residents to be involved in activities, they held a floor war competition all year. Students earned points for their floor by participating in Regents activities, going to an RCC meeting or playing an intramural sport.

"The winning floor got a pizza party and a T-shirt," Morrow said.

The Rhinos worked hard to support the community and encouraged the residents to be active members of the campus community.

Richmond College

Programs Increase Opportunities For Students

It is said, "home is where the heart is" and the home for many Murray State University students is Richmond College, home of the Lions.

Richmond residents, like other students who live in residential colleges, had an opportunity to build relationships and take on leadership roles within their residence. The college provided students with programs that helped them grow intellectually and socially and also allowed them to give back to the university and Murray community.

Dr. Oliver Muscio, Richmond Residential College Head, said the fact that Richmond was smaller and had less residents than other colleges allowed them to get to know each other better and form better connections, friendship and involvement.

"We have a very close community and enjoy just having the opportunity to hang out," Kris Gordon, senior from Belleville, Ill. and president of Richmond College Residential Council, said. "Programs are one way of building a stronger community and providing residents with time to meet and get to know each other better."

A typical room in Richmond is shown. Residents were all given a standard room, but were able to decorate rooms to fit their personalities.

Lions

Richmond encouraged involvement in the college by providing students with a variety of opportunities and programs that provided entertainment that appealed to many students and personalities. Richmond had several annual programs along with unique programs that were planned by the resident advisors.

One such activity was the Christmas dinner. Faculty, staff and students were invited to celebrate Christmas in the residential college and join in the family experience of college life. The home-cooked meal and fellowship was filled with the holiday spirit and provided students and faculty a time of fellowship and relaxation before finals and makes time away from relatives easier. Last year the program won the award for NRHH program of the month.

Another successful program was a flashback to high school- the prom. Richmond, along with Springer College worked together Spring 2004 to provide a night to remember.

"We got to have dates, dress-up and hang out with people in our residential college that we were already close to, but also see the relationship of other colleges and interact," Chantel Draves, junior from Belleville, Ill., said. "It was entertaining and exciting, just a lot of fun."

Not all programs dealt with the social aspect. Richmond included activities that involved helping other. Richmond members were very active in Relay for Life and Up 'Til Dawn. The RCC helped raise money and food for Needline and provide students with the opportunity to be mentors at Murray Middle School.

"I enjoy my job because I get to interact with everyone on a personal level and provide the residents with the chance to find a special place at Murray State," Gordon said. "We also look for ways to get involved other than just within the university and Richmond."

Blindfolded so he doesn't have to see what he is putting in his mouth, a resident of Springer/Franklin drinks a mystery mixture. Members of Springer/Franklin were playing their version of "Fear Factor."

Springer/Franklin College

Working Hard To Bring the Community Closer Together

The goal of Springer-Franklin College was to bring the residential college community closer together. By participating in campus-wide activities and community service, the Fighting Terrapins worked hard to make a positive name for themselves on campus.

Springer-Franklin College kicked off its fall semester by having a "Trading Spaces" competition. Springer's five-member team renovated the library of Franklin, while Franklin's team renovated Springer's library.

"One of our residents is working really hard to design the room in Franklin," Jenny Naes, junior from St. Louis and President of Springer College, said.

The Terrapins also hosted Freekee-Teekee in the spring semester, which was a block party for everyone on campus. There was food and karaoke for everyone to enjoy.

Two Springer/Franklin girls cautiously put their hand in a bowl of worms. Some residents actually ate worms as a part of the gross game that members of Springer/Franklin were playing.

Terrapins

The residential college also participated in the Homecoming parade. Springer-Franklin residents wore turtle shells and gave away candy and balloons to people in the crowd.

Community service was also on the minds of residents. They also hosted a 3-on-3 basketball tournament with all proceeds going to the Needline Food Pantry in Murray. Even move-out day involved giving back to the community.

“We set up boxes in the lobby for all the residents to donate the food they don’t want to take home with them. It all goes to Needline,” Geco Ross, sophomore from Paducah, and President of Franklin College, said.

The holidays gave residents a fun opportunity to help out in the community. For Halloween, they hosted a party and costume contest and had the children of College Courts residents trick-or-treat at their College.

To celebrate Thanksgiving, they held a potluck dinner in the Curris Center. Faculty and students brought food and had an opportunity to meet one another. Residents also participated in the hanging of the green and went caroling at local nursing homes at Christmas. They took part in the “Adopt-a-Family” program as well. Residents donated canned food and held floor war competitions to raise money for a local family in need.

One of the highlights of the year for the terrapins was winning the spirit award at the Racer Rally.

“Our residents dressed up to represent us and Murray State,” Ross said, “They wore turtle shells, baseball t-shirts with Franklin on them, and had pom-poms in their hair.”

In addition to their charity work, the residents took an interest in the presidential debates. They held a viewing of the third debate and had a discussion of the issues with College Head Kenneth Bowman.

Springer-Franklin worked hard to improve the academics of its residents. It was the first residential college to have its own class in the building. In the spring semester, Humanities 212 was taught in Franklin College for residents of Springer-Franklin College in an effort to build community between the buildings.

“It’s really good for freshman because they will live with people in their class and feel more relaxed,” Naes said, “It will also be easier for them to form study groups.”

“We want to fulfill the residential college model, and one aspect of that is academics,” Ross said.

The Terrapins worked hard throughout the year to better the community.

“We’re making a name for ourselves and want to maintain the momentum we have,” Ross said, “We want to build a positive community so our residents have pride in being a Terrapin.”

White College

Easing the transition for international students

A heart beating, nausea in your stomach and sleepless nights are all symptoms of a soon-to-be college freshman. The transition from high-school to college was not easy for anyone. It was especially hard for someone not only moving from across the country, but across the world as well.

That was why White College strived to make this transition as easy as possible for international students. Throughout the year White College sponsored several events that were directed at international students to help them feel more at home on campus at Murray State University. Some of these programs included Where I'm From, a Taste of the World and The Chinese New Year.

Freshman Linda Grira of Tunisia, Africa was one of many international students who made White College their new home. She said she was pleased with the welcoming she received from the White College Staff.

"I always grew up with the notion that I would have to leave," Grira said. "Still, when the time came it was not easy leaving my friends. White College helped me with the transition."

First Year Leader, Dorcus Norwich, helps Freshmen move in. Dorcus was one of the thirteen White College First Year Leaders.

Attending the programs held in White College, Grira met many new friends.

"By going to the programs I got to meet many new people," Grira said. "The people at White College take care of you when you are down. There is always someone stopping by my room just to say hi."

After moving in, Grira became very active within White College. She was one of the floor representatives for the Residential College Council

Through programs, activities and a welcoming atmosphere, White College tried to make international students feel at home. Because White College was home to a great majority of international students it was essential to provide programming for these students. Many have taken on that responsibility.

"White College strives to facilitate an accepting, warm, environment for everyone, especially for international students who may be missing home," Natalie Blackmon, graduate student from Paducah and White College Residential Director, said.

International programs were a passion of both the Residential Advisors as well as the Residential College Council. As a new Residential Advisor, Justin Hill, senior from Marion, decided he wanted to make sure he offered programs in which international students would benefit from.

"I felt that international students get left out of programs sometimes," Hill said. "So I thought that I would focus on that and get them more involved in the Residential College Activities."

With his Freshmen Year Leader team, Hill presented many programs not only dealing with international students but putting them in a situation where they could interact with students from the United States.

"One of our programs both international students as well as students from the United States were actively involved." Stacey Woods, sophomore from Franklin, Tenn., and RCC Vice-President, said. "We were able to get to know each other and learn more about each other's countries."

Hill's team, which also included Andrea Graham, junior from Belize City, Belize, and Rebecca Woodall, senior from Marion, presented an International Progressive dinner.

Each of the eight floors were assigned a country. The floors worked together to prepare food from their assigned country. Residents went from floor to floor experiencing meals from different countries. Residents were charged one dollar to eat. The money raised went to White College Relay for Life team.

"I hope to break the barrier of shyness that some international students have, and make them feel more comfortable around United States natives as well as other international students," Hill said.

As an international student, Graham attended many of the programs White College sponsored her first year at Murray State.

Said Graham; "I feel that White College has made a very good effort in incorporating programs with the awareness of international students which has made us feel welcome."

Friends and family of spring graduates crowd the RSEC to watch their loved ones walk across the stage. A record number of students were in attendance at graduation.

After the ceremony, Jodi Martin, graduating senior from Marion, spends time with family. Hotels in Murray were booked months in advanced to make room for family and friends of graduates.

2005 Spring Graduation

Murray State breaks graduation records and continues a tradition

Graduation is a special time for any institution, but it was always especially exciting at Murray State University. Records for graduation applicants and ceremonial participants had a continuous trend of being broken every spring at Murray State, and this tradition of expanding excellence was continued at the Spring 2005 Commencement.

Murray State found itself with an all-time high of 1,155 applicants for graduation. In addition, the registrar's office reported that a record number of these applicants attended the graduation ceremonies. Despite these improvements, they came as no surprise to Murray staff or students.

"I've always felt that Murray State was one of the fastest growing colleges in the state, and I feel that it will continue to grow fast after I'm gone," graduate Danny Robertson, from Evansville, Indiana, said.

The fact was that the university consistently beat the graduation goal set for it by the Council on Postsecondary Education and exhibited the second highest six-year graduation rate among Kentucky's public universities. Murray State's 57.3 percent was second only to the University of Kentucky's 59.6 percent in 2005.

"Despite the fact that Murray State is the state's sixth largest university, our university graduates Kentucky's fourth highest number of students. This is a strong indication of the performance of MSU and its economic and social value to our region," MSU president, Dr. F. King Alexander said.

Besides record achievement, the Spring 2005 Commencement was about the seniors and their outstanding accomplishment. Two seniors stood out because of their scholastic and community success and were awarded with the Outstanding Man and Woman for May 2005. The Outstanding Senior Man was Brad A. Modlin, an Organizational Communication and English-Creative writing major from Bowling Green, Ky. The Outstanding Senior Woman was Laura P. Nixon, a Communication Disorders and Spanish major from Murray, Ky.

Both of these students had exceptional resumes to deserve them of this great honor, including impressive academic credentials, community service reputations, and all-round campus involvement. Based on their qualifications, it was obvious that they symbolized all that was outstanding in the Spring 2005 graduation class.

The graduation ceremony, as was customary, had a sentiment of remembering the past while focusing on the future. The speeches from some of the faculty and the two Outstanding Seniors were conducted with dignity and were well received. After the graduates walked, the energy felt was electric as the excitement built to the ceremonial switching of the tassel.

With a record number of graduates, the feelings about leaving Murray State were mixed, but nonetheless emotional after the ceremonies ended. Some graduates exhibited happiness and joy, while others tried their best to hold back their tears. The overall feeling of the crowd was an extension of the speeches during the ceremony as both excitement for the future and sadness for leaving the past were present.

As stated by graduate Alicia Ray from Rineyville, Kentucky: "I feel sadness that I have to leave this part of my life, but I am definitely ready to experience the next chapter."

The Shield

S t a f f

This year has been full of drastic changes while bringing back old traditions to the Murray State Shield.

For the first time ever, the Shield was published in full color. The release date of the book was moved from the usual spring distribution to a fall mailing. Also, we switched publishing companies to Taylor Publishing, which allowed for more creativity and more modern options.

We brought back the young tradition of "Bust Our Bulbs" to allow for more people to be pictured in the book. Also, the greek section underwent some changes to look more like its counterparts from the greek sections in the 1960's and 1970's volumes of the yearbook.

The staff that I had the privilege of working with this year was amazing. Together we were able to make this book something worth remembering. Despite the fact that our office for fifteen people was smaller than the typical residential college room, we worked hard and were dedicated all the way through May.

We enjoyed some perks this year that the yearbook hasn't seen in a while due to minimal budget, which made creating this book a little more fun. In November, Taylor Publishing and the Murray State Journalism Department funded a trip to Nashville to the Associated Collegiate Press Conference. Also, in the early fall we received three new emac computers, that we lovingly named Alvin, Simon and Theodore. Our photographers said goodbye to the darkroom this year with the purchase of two new digital cameras: The Canon Rebel and the Nikon CoolPix.

I'm honored to have experienced such a noteworthy year and to have been a part of the production of such an amazing book.

Finally, I have to take a personal moment to thank my "assistant" and more importantly, my wonderful boyfriend, Kyser: Thank you so much for all of the late nights, the support, the smiles and for putting up with my 'yearbook modes' and mood swings. I could never have made it through this year without you. I love you!

"Going to Nashville with the yearbook staff was not only a great experience to expand my knowledge for journalism but it was such a great opportunity to get to hang out with the staff and get to know one another better. I would like to thank the Dept. of Journalism and our Taylor Representative for making the trip possible."

"One of my favorite memories is the street where Shania Twain was doing her Good Morning America appearance, and we were there and all of the people were already waiting. Also, when Marshall, Karly, Amanda C. and I went bar hopping (social meeting place) and just hung out all night."

-casey

"My favorite part about the trip to nashville was getting to hang out with the staff after the first day of the conference."

"I think the new computers helped us to be more productive in the office, since more people could work at one time. 'Alvin', 'Simon' and 'Theodore' were definitely a highlight of the year."

While gathered around a table at Tom's Grill, staff members receive "I've noticed" prizes, celebrate a great year, and say goodbye graduating seniors. Staff members were rewarded "I've noticed" cards throughout the year for exceptional work and the cards were drawn at the party for prizes.

Standing outside of Tom's Grill, Marshall Welch, junior from Murray and Karly Grither, senior from St. Genevieve, Mo., say goodbye after the end of the year party. Several friendships were formed as a result of working together on the yearbook staff.

Bust Our Bulbs

After taking a year off, The Shield hosted a new and improved version of "Bust Our Bulbs." During the 2004-2005 school year the staff of The Shield became the proud new owners of a Canon Digital Rebel camera allowing them amazing versatility and mobility in capturing crazy candids.

Photographers and other staff members set up shop in several locations across campus throughout one week in April and let students and staff pose for a free picture that was guaranteed a spot in the yearbook. The photography team was able to capture nearly 100 pictures with approximately 200 students and staff featured.

As the year came to a close, Murray State students, faculty and staff found themselves at a pivotal point in the history of the university, the nation and even the world.

During the 2004-2005 school year Murray State celebrated the opening of three new facilities. In August, the new biology building, the first of a three-phase building project, was opened for classes. In January, the new Wellness Center opened its doors to students, faculty and staff anxious to make good on their New Year's resolutions. Also in January, Thoroughbred Café, a coffee shop serving Starbucks brand coffee opened in the bottom of Hart Residential College.

On a national level, many students participated in voting and watched as George W. Bush was elected to his second term as President of the United States in November and many grimaced as gas prices soared well above $2 a gallon later in the year.

Globally, those at MSU proudly cheered a fellow student, Morgan Hicks, in August as she participated in the United States' rifle team in the 2004 Olympic Games in Athens, Greece. Murray State hosted Nobel Peace Prize winner F.W. de Klerk, who spoke to a large crowd in Lovett Auditorium about the realities of globalization.

Meanwhile, students all over campus presented views both in support of and in opposition to the ongoing war in Iraq. After the tsunami disasters in Asia, the campus united to support the many victims affected by the tragedy.

Catholic and protestant students alike mourned the death of Pope John Paul II and anxiously awaited the announcement of his successor, Pope Benedict XVI.

Looking back, the school year was a year of change, growth, traditions and new ventures. It was a year of great success and trying times. When all was said and done, after all of the good times as well as times when lessons had to be learned, the 2004-2005 year was a year that will always be REMEMBERED.
